AMERICAN FINDS TWO 'KIDNAPED' CHILDREN

Spirited from the midst of a sleeping family at South Weymouth, two children, three and four years old, were whirled to Lowell by automobile today.

Although the father, Austin L. Fisher, who pursued them, was unable to find the children, they were found by the Boston Evening American in Lowell.

The police to whom Fisher appealed were unable to take action because he did not have legal custody of the little ones, with the result that the father spent the day on the steps of his wife's home at No. 173 Westford street, Lowell.

Mrs. Mildred McKenzie of No. 46 Smith street, Lowell, sister of Mrs. Fisher, admitted that the children were in possession of the moth-

W. T. A. FITZGERALD IN MAYOR RACE TO FINISH

William T. A. Fitzgerald, in a statement to the Boston Evening American today, denied emphatically that he is out of the mayoralty race as was reported.

Mr. Fitzgerald declared he is in the fight to a finish, and added the only compromise candidate he would agree on is himself.

"There is absolutely no truth," he said, "in the statement contained in the early editions of some of today's evening papers to the effect that I 'virtually withdrew' from the mayoralty race at the Democratic City Committee meeting last night.

TOTS KIDNAPED IN "NIGHTIES"

"Kidnapers" slipped into the bed chamber of Mrs. Alda Fisher, in South Weymouth, in the dead of night, and took her little granddaughter, Shirley Fisher, aged four. They then took little Jack, aged three, and slipped away in an auto before the grandmother, aroused by their departure, could warn their father and three other men of the family, sleeping nearby. The father and mother of the children separated two years ago and she now has the children.

ONE SHOT, 2 TROOPERS HURT IN KLAN RIOT

North Brookfield, Sept. 19.—One man was shot, two State Constabulary troopers were injured, scores of persons hurt, and two arrests made in one of the worst Klan outbreaks this section has yet witnessed.

Fighting viciously with whatever weapon came to hand, knights of the hood and robe battled with local antis until the main square was blood stained and littered with debris.

The State Constabulary, called from Holden, Brookfield and Oxford finally ended the fracas, but not until heavy toll had been taken on both sides.

As a climax to the melee, Edward Moody of Providence, said to be a Klan sympathizer, was nearly drowned in a horse trough in which a group of antis ducked him.

Daniel Harrington and Wallace Foote, both of North Brookfield, arrested on charges of rioting, were arraigned today, Harrington charged with disturbing the peace, and

HEIRESS DRAGGED OFF IN CAR HAD LOVE TILT; FEAR SLAYING

Twenty minutes after Dorothy Dudley, Brockton heiress, vanished among the trees in a wooded swamp near the Bridgewater-Brockton line, a big limousine scorched through the streets of Brockton, a few miles away, with a girl screaming frantically from the back seat while several men tried to pull her back and keep her silent.

The limousine was seen by Austin W. Johnson of No. 577 West Chestnut street, Brockton, he told the police today. It was passing Chestnut and Market streets when he saw it, headed for the Cement road and Taunton.

Mr. Johnson was accompanied by his family, and waiting for a street car.

BELIEVE HER SLAIN.

His story created a tremendous stir among those seeking the Brockton girl, who shook the restraining arm of her sweetheart, Ernest Briggs of Abington, off her arm, and walked into the forest and oblivion early last Sunday evening.

It lent support to the theory of those who said she was abducted, and did not affect the cocksureness of those investigators who subscribed to the murder theory. The latter believe she was both kidnaped and murdered, her kidnapers putting her to death after she recognized one of them.

Chief of Police Nickerson, of Abington is fully convinced that the girl, whose cries were heard in Brockton, was Miss Dudley.

Failure to find her body in the swampy, wooded country near the town line has weakened the confidence of those who originally inclined to the theory of suicide.

WALKS TO HER FATE.

Miss Dudley had been walking along the road from Bridgewater to Brockton with her sweetheart. They quarrelled, he admits. She drew away from him, walked into the shadows of the trees and motioned for him to go on alone.

He walked a little further and a street car passed. She was not on

Coolidge Scoffs At Style Dictum In Straw 'Lid'

Washington, Sept. 19 (A.P.)—President Coolidge demonstrated today that he would rather be comfortable than fashionable.

Setting out for a stroll through the business section, he decided it was too warm for a felt hat, prescribed at the proper headgear after September 15.

Instead, he wore a straw sailor, which had seen a Summer of service. He was envied by hundreds of sailing passers-by, many of them government clerks sweltering under caps and fedoras.

'BIG BROTHER' EMERY WEDS

A secret marriage, the culmination of a romance which had its inception through radio station WEEI, became known today with the announcement that "Big Brother" Claire Robins Emery of that station and Katherine Nees, his secretary, were married August 29 at Waltham by Rev. E. B. Ridout.

Announcement of the engagement was made several weeks ago and thousands of radio admirers of the "Big Brother" hastened to offer congratulations. No date for the wedding was announced at that time but no one suspected the ceremony would take place secretly.

The romance started when the bride appeared in an amateur production staged by a local department store where she was employed. Emery met her and it was a case of love at first sight. When Emery was chosen announcer at WEEI, Miss Nees went with him as secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery are now living in Newton. She will retain her interests in the station.

TANK SHIP BLOWS UP; ALL BUT ONE SAVED

Bath, Me., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The motor tank ship Solitaire has been blown up off the Florida coast. A message from another member of the crew said all had been saved except the radio operator.

AGED MAN PAYS BILL, FREES WOMAN IN JAIL

A Prince Charming, although venerable with years, today rescued Dr. Emily C. McLeod of No. 20 Thatcher street, Hyde Park, from Charles street jail, where she has been confined since Tuesday.

Dr. McLeod was committed for contempt of court when she refused to pay a plumber's bill of $174, and costs, totalling $209.05.

Shortly after noon today an unidentified man of considerable age paid the money to Chief Clerk James Morris and Dr. McLeod was released. She departed with her rescuer.

BRIGGS TELLS POLICE OF QUARREL WITH MISSING SWEETHEART

TROOPERS COMBING STATE

ft. He turned about and went home.

Miss Dudley, as she was known, although a divorcee, to all intents and purposes walked on and on to the edge of the world, for she has not been back.

Today Chief Nickerson of Abington will enlist the aid of State detectives in the mystery.

Weary and bedraggled after an unsuccessful search for traces of the girl in the West Abington woods, a large posse of police, firemen and citizens under Chief Henry Nickerson, Fire Chief Casey and Michael Flanagan chairman of the Selectmen, abandoned the task late last night.

TELLS OF QUARREL.

Since Miss Dudley's employer Mrs. Wallace C. Flagg of No. 157 Belmont street, Brockton first gave news of the girl's disappearance, early this week, police of that city have searched for the girl.

It was not until Friday morning that young Briggs went to Chief Nickerson of Abington and told him of the quarrel and flight of the girl into the woods.

Later, to a Boston Evening American reporter in the small house which he occupies with his mother, No. 83 Block street, Abington, he said:

"I first met Dorothy four years ago. We were both employed in a shoe factory in East Bridgewater. She was living with her father, Walter Dudley. She came to visit me at my mother's home in Abington here. Then she went to Tacoma, Washington, where her mother lives. Later she returned and we kept company.

DISAGREED ABOUT DIVORCE.

"She had been divorced in Washington from a Mr. Dyson, she said. Told me that her mother helped her get her divorce. But she didn't have the papers and when she talked of our marriage I thought it was necessary to have the divorce papers first. We often quarreled about the divorce and our marriage.

"About twenty minutes to eight she said she wanted me to go out with her for a walk along the road towards Whitman. I didn't want to go. She insisted but when we left the house I again refused to walk toward Whitman and we strolled along to Brockton avenue where she usually gets her car to Brockton.

"We kept quarrelling along the way. Just before we came to the trolley car stop, near the path, she jumped into the woods. I kept on walking toward Brockton but finally turned back."

206 CHINESE NOW ARE HELD IN TOMBS

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—As a result of continued tong murders, 206 Chinese were in the Tombs today awaiting deportation.

Out of 1,100 nabbed in two raids this week on Chinatown those at the Tombs have been unable to produce certificates of registration as required by law for the presence of Chinese in the country.

The latest raid followed more tong murders here and in Pittsburgh notwithstanding a tong peace treaty.

HOSPITAL HEAD IS DEAD IN WESTFIELD

Westfield, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Miss Maria MacDaniel, for the past six years superintendent of the Noble Hospital here, died today after several months' illness. She came here from Columbia, S. C., where she was superintendent of a hospital. She was a sister of Dr. Orianna MacDaniel of Minneapolis, a member of the State board of medicine and registration. She is survived by two brothers, Jasper R. MacDaniel of Malden and M. T. MacDaniel of Dover, N. H. Burial will be in Westfield.

NEW SUSPECT HELD IN FLORENCE KANE DEATH

New York, Sept. 19.—A white man, under suspicion of having murdered Miss Florence Kane, sister of Detective James Kane, is held by police in Brooklyn. It was learned that he has made several conflicting statements regarding his movements on the night Miss Kane was slain. Herotofore it had been asserted the slayer was a colored man.

4 RUM SHIPS ANCHOR CLOSE TO NEW YORK

Washington, Sept. 19 (I.N.S.).—An attempt by foreign liquor smuggled to remobilize Rum Row was seen in official reports to the Coast Guard today, which showed that four liquor vessels have anchored within twenty miles of New York. To combat the new activities of smugglers two Coast Guard cutters were ordered to the Atlantic seaboard from the Great Lakes.

After the meetings in Wells Hall, strike leaders said forty mechanics employed at the garages of the company had joined the walkout.

A committee consisting of Walter G. Grant, Matthew Shaughnessey, John McDonald, H. Caponolli and J. T. Fitzgibbons, business agent of the Local No. 126, was named to see the company officials and discuss terms. That meeting got under way early this afternoon.

IGNORE WAGE ISSUE.

The strike does not directly concern wages, union leaders said. It was brought on by a company order that the men buy out of their wages new sets of livery and new overcoats, at a total cost of $58.

Officials of the company would not discuss the strike before the meeting with the committee of strikers. One would say, but not to be quoted directly, that if the men would drop the demand for recognition of the union the company would drop the matter of new clothes, or pay for the clothes out of the company's treasury.

J. T. Fitzgibbons of No. 2241 Washington street, Roxbury, business agent of Local 126, Teamsters', Chauffeurs' and Stable Helpers' Union, asserted today that all the cabs of the company were idle.

The drivers complain that last year they were compelled to pay $19.75 for new overcoats.

No call was sent out to the men, and, apparently, they had no leader.

Accordingly, the early morning police were amazed to see the flock of taxis swooping down on the Public Garden shortly after one o'clock.

More than 100 cars were parked just outside the Garden, while the protesting drivers gathered inside the fence. Then, by unanimous vote, it was determined to strike.

The men without further ado drove their cars back to the garages and declared the strike.

Strolling Skunks Add Gas Masks To Motoring

Westfield, Sept. 19.—(By I. N. S.)—Gas masks as an automobile accessory are being introduced here with reported success.

So many skunks are nightly being run over by motorists through this section htat enterprising local dealers are preparing for a run on the commodity.

Official checkup of one night's execution by balloon and cord motor wheels totals eight finely-stripped pole cats. Of that number her five met their demies within the residential confines of the city.

DISABLED VETERANS GUESTS OF FULLER

One hundred and forty disabled war veterans from the various hospitals in and around Boston today met at the State House and journeyed to Rye Beach, N. H., as the guest of Governor Fuller. It took 32 touring cars to accommodate the party.

Special guests were Department Commander Francis J. Good, Vice-Commander Richard F. Paul, Past Commander Leo M. Harlow, Col. John F. Pj. Herbert, Legislative Agent Robert J. White, and Thomas F. Coughlin, chairman of the Americanization Committee, all of the Legion.

Foote with disturbing the peace and assault on an officer. Their cases were continued until September 30. Further arrests are promised by the police.

The wounded man, whose identity was not revealed, was spirited away after Chief of Ponce Stephen Quill had shot him in the leg.

The police official was himself then beaten so badly by Klansmen that he was left in a semi-conscious condition on the sidewalk.

Trooper Daniel McIsaac was knocked unconscious by a blow from a club while trying to separate a group of battling men, and Trooper Downey was badly injured when struck on the head by a stone.

For a time the klansmen, more than 1,000 in number, held virtual possession of the town, after one of the largest meetings which has been staged in this vicinity for months.

The trouble started when Chief Quill arrested a member of the hooded order for disturbing the peace. The Klan meeting was called for the Boynton farm, two miles from the centre of the town, the estate formerly owned by the lamented baseball catcher, Martin Bergin.

MAFALDA INVITES SERVANTS TO WEDDING

Racconigi, Italy, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Princess Mafalda, second daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, has displayed her devotion to her intimates by inviting to her wedding to Prince Philip of Hesse next Wednesday all the servants who attended her in her childhood, including her aged nurse, Vincenzina Stirpe.

'BOSTON OPERA' SINGERS IN FIST FIGHT

The Boston Civic Opera Company, which recently was refused official recognition by Governor Fuller in that the name was misleading, the organization not being purely civic, is having its troubles in New York.

The trouble started backstage at the Manhattan Opera House when Frank Schurman, walking delegate for the Choral Alliance, demanded that the members of the chorus be paid in full before the performances of "Norma" started.

Only $700 had been paid and Schurman demanded the $800 due. When Thomas Walker, managing director, offered Schurman a check for $800 it was spurned. The walking delegate then asked for cash.

When it was not forthcoming, the fight started. Schurman's ear was almost severed in the melee. Two policemen watched over Director Alberto Baccolini until the opera was under way. Then he was compelled to retire and was arrested charged with assault. When the performance was ended he was arraigned in court and released in $1,000 bail.

Mme. Clara Jacobo, who sang the title part, was overcome by hysterics near the end of the first act, when Baccolini was retired under police escort.

The scene in the opera house as Conductor Baccolini left the orchestra pit under guard of police had no parallel in the history of the old structure.

Order was finally restored and the performance continued.

Before the curtain rose on the final act hundreds of patrons stormed the ticket offices demanding to know the reason for the delay in starting the opera. They demanded return of their money and the house was but half full when finally the performance began.

Schurman, the labor delegate, was summoned to appear against Director Baccolini when the latter was arraigned in court. Seven stitches were taken in Schurman's ear as a result of the backstage fight. It is alleged that Baccolini bit Schurman's ear.

HUNT KIDNAPER OF 2 BABIES

er, and it is believed they will be taken to a camp at The Weirs on Lake Winnepesaukee.

Neither Fisher nor the police were able to find anyone at Mrs. Fisher's home, but the crying of children was heard at the home of Mrs. McKenzie.

The little ones are Shirley Fisher, four years old, and her three-year-old brother, Jack, who, since their parents' separation, a year or more ago, have made their home with their father and grandparents in South Weymouth.

DIDN'T AROUSE HER.

Four-year-old Shirley was sleeping with her grandmother, while her brother was asleep in an adjoining room when taken.

On a sleeping porch, outside, four male members of the family were asleep, including their father, their grandfather, and two uncles.

Yet so quietly did the kidnapers work that nobody heard their coming or going.

The grandmother was the first to realize what had happened when she heard the sound of a motor running just outside the Fisher home on Randolph street, South Weymouth.

Then she noticed that little Shirley was no longer at her side. She went to the window just in time to see a car speeding up the road, and two bundled little figures could be seen tightly held in the arms of one of the occupants.

By the time the grandmother aroused the male members of the family, the car was well on its way to its destination.

The mother of the two has been separated from the father for some time. She is Mrs. Lillian Fisher, now living at No. 175 Westford street, Lowell.

Investigation revealed the fact that the kidnappers, believed to have been two men, used a small ladder evidently made for the purpose, which was found under the window of the boy's room.

After removing little Jack to the automobile, the kidnappers cleared a passageway to the room of Mrs. Alda Fisher, the grandmother, lifting a table and bureau on to Jack's bed to get them out of the way.

AUNT HEARS CRIES.

The little girl was taken from the arms of her sleeping grandmother so gently that the woman failed to awaken until the kidnappers started away in their car. Mrs. Fisher's awakened her sons, Austin, the father of the children, and his brother Roy, who notified the police.

Mrs. Margaret Jones, a niece of Mrs. Fisher, who lives on Main street, reported she was awakened by the screaming of the children as they were whirled by her house in the machine.

The police searched the neighborhood without result, and Austin Fisher then started for Lowell.

GENERAL HART ACCUSED OF FORGERY

The accusation is that he signed the name of another man to a telegram to Secretary of War Weeks suggesting an investigation of the quartermaster corps, having a bearing on General Rogers' reappointment as quartermaster general.

That serious accusation is made in an affidavit by Mrs. Teresa Howard Dean, former writer on a scandalous weekly magazine, which published a series of defamatory attacks on General Rogers, and is attached to the formal charges against General Hart filed with the war department, it was revealed today.

The charge, as set out in Mrs. Dean's affidavit, follows:

"Deponent further deposes that in the Spring or early Summer of 1922, when the question of General Harry L. Rogers' reappointment as quartermaster general was a subject of more or less general talk, Colonel William H. Hart told her that he had signed the name of Mr. J. C. Schemm, secretary treasurer of the Sherwin Publishing Company, publishers of a telegram which he, Colonel Hart, sent Secretary of War Weeks, suggesting certain investigation in connection with matters in the quartermaster corps, having a bearing on General Rogers' reappointment as quartermaster general, and which telegram had been sent by way of strengthening or emphasizing the articles which had been appearing about General Rogers and conditions in the quartermaster corps.

The charges that General Hart, while a colonel under General Rogers, "maliciously, selfishly and disloyally" plotted to prevent his superior's reappointment as quartermaster general and to procure his own appointment to the office, created a great stir throughout army and social circles of the capital where both men are well known.

An immediate investigation of the accusations was ordered by the War Department. The case, it was stated, is now in the hands of Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff, and will be laid before the inspector general for review.

Although War Department heads reluctantly admitted that the charges had been filed, they refused to comment further than to say they knew there had been friction between General Rogers and General Hart while the former was quartermaster general.

CANDLE SETS WOMAN AFIRE

Mrs. Blanche Miner, fifty-five years old, widow, was fatally burned today when she set her nightdress afire with a candle while searching in a closet in her apartment at No. 783 Washington street.

Smelling smoke, Mrs. Minnie Wetherell, who lives in the same house, entered the Miner apartment and found the woman unconscious on the floor.

She notified the police, who rushed Mrs. Miner to the City Hospital, where it was said she was dying.

W. T. A. 'FITZ' IN MAYOR'S RACE TO FINISH

felt absolutely confident of winning and that no inducement of any kind could cause me to consider a withdrawal.

"If a compromise is desired the only compromise that I favor or would agree to would be one that would make me the compromise candidate.

LOMASNEY FOR JOHN.

"This withdrawal story is entirely hostile propaganda and made out of whole cloth."

John F. Fitzgerald, the man who glorified "Sweet Adline," is Martin Lomasney's choice for mayor, according to the political wiseacres.

But even as this opinion, promulgated from the rear of City Hall and the "Lobby," is given out, it must be remembered that the opinion of the oldest expert is of no more value in this hectic mayoral fight than is the guess of the big butter and egg man from the West who knows nothing of Boston's politics.

And this opinion comes despite the fact that General Edward L. Logan, Sheriff John A. Kelliher and District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien are still confident, individually, of the support of the dictator of the West End.

FORCED IN BY LABOR.

As was expected, the meeting of the Democratic City Committee, the Lomasney organization accomplished little. No compromise candidate was offered, and the only accomplishment of the meeting was the virtual retirement from the mayoral race of City Councillor James A. Moriarty.

Jim Moriarty was forced into the mayoral fight by the labor unions, whose cause he has advocated so long and so efficiently.

NO LABOR VOTE.

But this astute student of things political knew from the first that he didn't have a ghost of a chance of being elected Mayor of Boston. His main business on Sunday afternoons since his forced candidacy was announced has been to journey from one union meeting to another to convince the leaders that he can be of infinitely more service to the cause of labor as a successful City Councillor than as a defeated mayoral candidate.

There is no labor vote in Boston, unless of course there is a direct labor issue, and this year no such issue arises.

BREACH IN SOLDIER VOTE.

This question of group voting leads to one other important point. General Logan's supporters are convinced that he will have the Good Government endorsement as well as the Lomasney support. If the political experts are right Logan is not to receive the Lomasney support and the fight over him in the ranks of the Goo-Goos is still on.

But even without these important props the soldier-jurist is a powerful candidate. The constitutions of both the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have written into them clauses that say they are non-partisan in matters political.

Maybe so, but if General Logan and General John H. Dunn both stay in the fight there comes a breach between the two soldier organizations just as surely as if the soldiers in each body held rival parades on the same day through Boston streets.

SPEED OF 302.5 MILES A RECORD

Mitchell Field, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Lieut. Alfred Williams, U.S.N., is happy today and a new unofficial world's speed record, his life-long ambition, is the cause for his rejoicing.

Flashing through the air at the speed of 302.3 miles an hour, an unofficial mark, he shattered the record of Adjt. Florentine Bonnett, of 275 miles an hour, established last December.

After climbing from the ground in spirals the plane poised hawk-like at 3,000 feet for a moment, before it plunged with motors roaring to within 300 feet of the ground and flattened out to shatter the record over a one-kilometer course.

Powered by a Curtiss V-1400 motor, the plane measures 22 feet from wing to wing tip, 19 feet 8¼ inches in length, and stands 8 feet ½ inch tall, weighing 2,200 pounds. It was built to average a speed of 255 miles an hour and passed acceptance tests attaining an average speed of 268.2 miles an hour.

Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation Henry F. Long today sent out tax warrants for a total of $13,036,350.95. Of this amount $3,204,981.34 was on foreign business corporations, and $9,834,369.71 for domestic business corporations. The aggregate, while slightly lower than last year's figure, will be swelled by additional tax bills to business corporations within the next two months. Individual income tax bills sent out amount to $14,623,123.73.

IT ALL DEPENDS on WHO says it. Mr. Saklatvala, Communist member of Parliament, can't come to the United States with other men selected by the British Parliament.

Saklatvala, born in India, attacked the British Union Jack in connection with British rule in India, and said the British flag ought to be torn down. Our government thinks he might say something like that about the Stars and Stripes. He wouldn't, of course, but anyway, he is a Communist, so he can't come in.

SUPPOSE OUR good, hard-fighting Irish friends of the old days or the modern "Irish Republic" had come here after denouncing the Union Jack and saying it should be torn down in Ireland. Many of them not only said so, but actually did tear it down. That's more than Saklatvala did.

Would any government of the United States refuse to let such an Irishman come in? IT WOULD NOT.

De Valera, "President of the Irish Republic," did about all he could do to the British flag and the British lion. Nevertheless he was not only allowed to come here, but to float a bond issue and raise millions of dollars for the Irish Republic. There is politics in everything, even in passports.

POOR JAPAN'S troubles seem never to cease, as though fate were determined that escaping the expenses and horrors of the big war, she should endure her share of suffering.

Yesterday came news of a great fire in Tokio, destroying the buildings in which the Japanese Legislature meets, injuring many, causing heavy loss in money. But nature herself can't discourage the Japanese, or conquer their courage.

IF YOU WANT to sell building material, hire a ship, load it, and sail down to the east and west coasts of Florida, that's the advice of Mizner, boss of Southern Florida.

To Miami German and Scandinavian ships bring cargoes of cement, and builders in fast boats rush to outbid their rivals.

It is almost impossible to get building materials, the East Coast Railroad having been obliged to put an embargo on freight, being 15,000 cars behind in carrying capacity.

FORTUNATELY for Florida, Lt. S. Davies Warfield, of the Seaboard Air Line, co-operating financially with Dillon and Reade, is increasing Florida's railroad facilities as fast as money can do it.

But meanwhile, dealers in building materials in the Northwest, near Seattle, or near Portland, Me., would do well to send salesmen to Florida and begin shipping building materials by boat. Inquire of Mr. Mizner, Palm Beach.

THE MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY will soon present to your kind attention a fossil horse, with claws instead of hoofs, dug up in Asia. According to scientists, this little creature, ancestor of the big horse of today with its hoofs, vanished from the earth long before men came here to need horses.

THAT WILL annoy and worry many that deny evolution, but they have a simple way out.

MAN DRUGGED AND ROBBED IN MALDEN

Found wandering in a daze in Marblehead today, Gaston Noterman, of No. 1393 Salem street, Malden, told the police he had been offered a ride by three autoists and given a draught of liquor so strong it immediately deadened his faculties and his memory. He said they robbed him of $38, slugged him and threw him out. He is thirty-nine years old, and works in an organ factory in Boston. The autoists picked him up in Malden square.

Buys Block on Which It Is Planned to Build Workers' "Co-op" Apartments

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has bought a square block of property in the Bronx on which the needle trades unions contemplated building a $2,000,000 co-operative apartment house for their members.

There is much speculation as to what Mr. Rockefeller intends to do with the property. Belief is expressed that he will finance a co-operative housing venture for workers.

The Standard Oil Company's employees' housing scheme at Bayonne, N. J., was adopted in a measure by the needle trades as an example for their venture. A Rockefeller announcement on the matter is to be made in the near future.

HOMES FOR WORKERS.

Morris Hillquit, counsel for the International Ladies Workers' Union, said the property was sold by the unions because a more suitable site had been found for the co-operative apartments.

The union's plans originally called for building 170 apartments to rent at $10 to $15 a month per room, including payments on mortgages. The building plans called for a large ball room and court yards with a sunken garden 237 feet long.

The unions bought the property for $170,000. Mr. Hillquit said the unions would soon incorporate another holding company and sell stock to workers in a new housing venture.

INITIAL MEETING OF BAZAAR COMMITTEE

JUDGE AHERN'S MOTHER BURIED IN HOLYHOOD

The funeral service of Mrs. Honora Ahearn, step-mother of Judge Timothy J. Ahearn of the Roxbury Court, and of Rev. Stephen Lee Ahern of St. Clements College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was held at the Mission Church, Roxbury, today, with a solmen high mass. Father Ahern was the celebrant of the mass, the Rev. James Gunn deacon, Rev. Francis Meehan, sub-deacon and Rev. John Parsons, master of ceremonies. Burial was at Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

HOT LUNCHES TO SCHOOL KIDS' ADVOCATED

Hot lunches of wholesome food to school children at cost during the late Fall and Winter months is advocated by the State health authorities.

Dr. Merrill E. Champion, director of the division of hygiene in the State Department of Health, said the practise of serving mid-morning lunches in the public schools is now general. The next step, he declared, is the adoption of the hot lunch idea during the noon recess.

He makes one criticism of school lunch counters run by private people for profit. At these counters, he declared, there is an absence of a well-balanced diet and the children get sweets and pickles to the exclusion of wholesome foods.

"The best example of the ideal school lunch system," he pointed out, "is that operated by the domestic science department in the Newton Junior High School, which is planned with regard to a wholesome diet and run as low as possible."

TROY'S PAL MAY HELP IN EXPOSE

Worcester, Sept. 19.—With the return here on Monday of Dennis J. Britt, member of the Troy gang who terrorized this city for the past several weeks, the complete expose of the local drug ring is confidentially expected.

Police have reason to believe that Britt was the friend of a Main street physician and are confident that his capture will solve a drug situation which has kept the department in a quandary for the past year.

Britt was arrested in Newark, N. J. His capture was effected when plans for a "job" were disclosed to the Newark police by a taxicab man whom he sought to enlist in the hold up.

A medical practioner of this city told the Boston Evening American that Britt had visited his office for the purpose of obtaining dope.

The leader of the Troy gang himself is known to have visited the physician who has exposed Britt's activities. The Worcester underworld is being scoured today by local detectives in search of Britt's sweetheart.

Dr. Howard's Captor Slain

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Kao Tien, leader of the bandits who kidnapped Dr. Harvey J. Howard, has been killed by another outlaw, thus nullifying plans for the American's release. Dr. Howard has been in captivity two months.

HURL SHOES FOR TITLE AT NIGHT

Police Find Salem Coach and City Physician in Midst of Heated Match

Salem, Sept. 19.—A squad of police reserves, on complaint of nervous residents, rushed with revolvers in hand to Bertram Athletic Field today, prepared to capture outlaws. They remained to weep.

For there in the headlight glare of six automobiles, they found two shirtsleeved men earnestly engaged in a horseshoe pitching contest, while a vociferous gallery cheered them on.

The contestants, it developed, were Dr. James P. Ryan, city physician, and Bill Broderick, Salem High School football coach.

They were engaged in settling for all time an argument that started in a local lunchroom.

DEFT IS ACCEPTED.

Dr. Ryan, it seems, maintained he was probably one of the best all-round horshshoe pitchers in captivity. Using either hand, at long or short distances, he was prepared to maintain his supremacy against all comers.

Broderick took instant exceptions. He declared the city physician knew no more about pitching horseshoes than a big ginger man from Jamaica. The coach said he was not accustomed to boasting, but intimated that if there was anyone in Essex County his superior in horseshoe pitching he had yet to be heard from.

The argument waxed heated, and eventually it was decided to adjourn to the high school athletic field and settle the controversy then and there.

Piling into six automobiles the party adjourned to the field, where the machines were lined up so that their headlights flooded the cinder running track.

COACH IS CHAMP.

The contest started and was well under way when neighbors phoned the police that marauders were gathering on the field, preparatory to nefarious work of some kind.

By the time the police arrived, Broderick had won the first game, 50 to 23, and excitement was so intense the John Laws had difficulty in even getting the details.

After the matter was cleared up to their satisfaction, the second game started. Broderick took this also, winning the championship of Bertram Field, and a side bet said to have been of consideable proportions.

Contestants, gallery and police then went home, and the neighbors went to bed.

$6,14,3247.85 SPENT ON STATE HIGHWAY WORK

The State has spent $6,143,247.85 for new roads and highway reconstruction work so far this year, about $3,000,000 more will be expended in maintaining existing highways and a smaller sum for incidental work, will bring the total cost for the year in excess of $10,000,000.

All of this money comes from fees obtained from the licensing and registering of automobiles and from fines for violations of the motor vehicle laws. The fines usually amount to $500,000.

SOMERVILLE ENROLLMENT 200 ABOVE THAT OF 1924

The enrollment in the Somerville public schools, according to Superintendent Charles S. Clark, is 14,675 pupils, about two hundred more than at this time last year. There are 8,861 pupils in the elementary schools of the city, and 2,329 in High School, three hundred less than the forecast. In the senior class of the high school, there are 310 girls and 224 boys.

CAESARIAN OPERATION SUCCEEDS

Artificial Respiration Starts Infant's Heart Beating at City Hospital

In the obstetrical ward at City Hospital a healthy six-pound baby girl is the centre of interest. In a South End home funeral arrangements are being completed for her mother, who died five minutes before the daughter made her entrance into this world.

A Caesarian operation performed on Mrs. Mary Cheney, forty, after life had departed, rewarded Dr. Cornelius T. O'Connor, twenty-six-year-old house surgeon, when after working unceasingly for an hour and a half the infant started breathing properly. Mrs. Cheney entered the hospital Sunday suffering from acute heart trouble.

Dr. O'Connor is a graduate of Boston College, class of '20, and of the Harvard Medical School in 1924.

FORD EXPECTED TO DEPART TODAY

Henry Ford is scheduled to leave the Wayside Inn at Sudbury today for Detroit and business.

The automobile genius has thoroughly enjoyed his brief rest at the quaint country home he purchased simply to be the site of just such brief rests, and now, refreshed and invigorated, he plans to return to the Auto City, and the hundreds of incidentals to his huge business.

The "richest man in the world" has been willing to talk on anything during his New England stay, save the reported loss of $5,000,000 to his company because the new model Ford was not ready to be put on the market at the date scheduled in the advertising.

MISS BROWN WED TO FRANCIS J. RYAN

Miss Madeleine Brown of Allston and Francis J. Ryan of Jamaica Plain, a Boston newspaperman, were married at a nuptial mass in St. Anthony's Church, Allston, today. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Nicholas J. Murphy, the rector. The bride was given in marriage by her father, James A. Brown of No. 437 Cambridge street, Allston. Miss Harriet G. Brown, her sister, was maid of honour. The best man was Arthur D. Ryan, a brother of the groom.

Following the reception to relatives and friends at the Brighblen Stone Club, the couple left on a wedding tour by motor through Canada and the mountains.

The couple following their return from their wedding tour will make their home at No. 11 Burwell road, West Roxbury.

SAYS ANDOVER ROAD TOO NARROW FOR BUSES

Lowell, Sept. 19.—Councillor Preston announced he would oppose the granting of permits to any persons to run buses over the Andover road as he believes the highway too narrow.

Vice Pres. F. A. Cummings at the hearing last Tuesday evening said he believed the road on Andover street was too narrow, but counsel for the other petitioner opposed that assertion.

Family deserted by Ernest R. McCreary, Lynn policeman (inset), who is believed to be somewhere in the West with a Lynn girl, 17 years old; (from left to right), Charles 16, holding John, five months' old; Shirley, eight; Francis, 16 months, and Ernest R., Jr. Mrs. Lyhe McCreary, wife and mother, is shown above. Patrolman McCreary, two weeks ago, requested and received a year's leave of absence without pay. At that time he told intimate friends he was going out West in order to build up his health. He mentioned Detroit as his probable stopping place, saying that he could procure a place in a factory there. When McCreary left the Shoe City, Frances Letvack, 17-year-old cashier in a Central street restaurant and considered to be one of Lynn's most attractive girls, also disappeared. She, as well as the patrolman, is being sought by the Lynn police. Miss Letvack is shown below.

RESIGNS POST TO BE BRIDE

After being identified 10 years with the motor industry in Boston, Miss Grace F. Gillin is to retire this week. On Columbus Day she will become a bride. From a beginner just out of school Miss Gillen has gone through all different grades of work until she became executive secretary for President C. T. Henshaw of the Henshaw Motor Company, distributor here for Dodge Brothers' cars and Graham Brothers' trucks. Miss G. F. Gillin.

Much responsibility rested upon her. She had charge of the advertising, for one thing.

Miss Gillen's ability was known outside the Henshaw organization, and she ranked with several others whose ability stands out along Motor Row.

Miss Gillen is to wed Edward J. Galvin at 9 o'clock on Oct. 12, when Rev. Fr. Twohig will perform the ceremony following a nuptial mass at St. Mark's Church, Dorchester. There is to be a wedding breakfast and reception at the bride's home No. 36 Shepton street.

Mr. Galvin is connected with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, where he is in charge of one of its important departments.

Lord Illingworth Seeks Divorce London Hears

London, Sept. 19.—Society gossips were busy today as the result of a report, published in the Daily Mirror, that Lord Illingworth, former postmaster general, intends instituting divorce proceedings against Lady Illingworth. Lord Illingworth who is sixty has served his government in many capacities and has been prominent in the industrial and economic life of Great Britain for many years.

He was created a Baron in 1922.

SYNAGOGUES CROWDED

Today is the first day of the Jewish New Year, the year 5686 of the Jewish calendar.

The celebration began with sundown last night, temples and synagogues being crowded with the worshippers. The celebration begins a long list of Jewish ceremonial days which are observed strictly by the Jewry of the world.

So great has been the demand for places at the Temple Israel on Commonwealth avenue, that it is necessary to conduct overflow meetings during the celebrations, and, accordingly, services will be held at Whitney Hall, Brookline, conducted by Rabbi Samuel Wolk, assistant to Rabbi Harry Levi of the Commonwealth avenue synagogue.

WOMAN DYING, HIT BY CAR

Anna Sullivan of No. 25 Derby street, Somerville is dying in Somerville Hospital despite the woman's efforts to save her from beneath a trolley car by the crew of Ladder 2 Company of Somerville.

The 35-year-old woman was waiting for an outbound Clarendon Hill car at Broadway and Walnut street, Somerville. She either became bewildered or slipped, but in any event was beneath the wheels before the operator, John Bemis, could stop the car.

The firemen picked their way in the dangerous effort to extricate the woman, who was wedged in beneath the truck, and were finally able to drag her, bruised and mangled, from her imprisonment, lasting fifteen minutes.

Physicians at the Somerville Hospital held out little hope of her escaping death.

SALEM WOMAN DIES OF SEVERE BURNS

Salem, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Cora E. Proctor, 70, who was burned yesterday afternoon, when an oil stove exploded in her apartment, number one Rust street, died today at the Salem hospital. It was felt she would recover, but a change set in early this morning. She was a widow and leaves no immediate family.

WIFE OF LYNN, COP ASKS AID

Mrs. Ernest R. MacCreary of Lynn, whose husband, Patrolman MacCreary, is mysteriously missing, has appealed to the Lynn Veterans' Bureau for financial assistance and been told it will not be forthcoming until she charges the vanished patrolman with desertion.

That she is not quite ready to do, harboring a vague hope he will return to her and be truthful of children.

MacCreary is the World War veteran and policeman who went away two weeks ago, as the pals Frances Letvack, a seventeen-year-old restaurant cashier, vani hed from her home in Lasonia Court, Lynn.

Chief Inspector William H. Kane, at the instance of residents of Boston street, Lynn, is quietly making an investigation of his own, to find out if there is a connection between the departure of the girl and that of the policeman, who is old enough to be her father.

Mrs. MacCreary says her husband told her he was going to motor to New York, then go on other South or West. He is on leave of absence from the force.

DOLLAR DAN'S BILL GAME IS FASCINATING

May Get Discouraged Too Easily When Lucky Numbers Don't Come Quick

It's a lot of fun—especially if you're lucky.

Nice fresh numbers every day.

And a goodly collection of numbers still unredeemed.

Dollar Dan bit into a busy game when he engaged to lift the jinx from Uncle Sam's $2 bills by paying for lucky Ones in Deuces.

"Enclosed find lucky dollar No. E31457854B for Monday," Lester Glasheen of No. 52 Third street, Leominster, wrote in today. "Looking over my dollar bills I find I am richer by ten dollars.

"I think it is great sport, looking for the lucky numbers, along with reading all the latest news, found in your paper."

Lester should get a good award for them kind words, but he gets $10 for $1, which is something.

You have the same chance, of course, to win cash—a sheaf of $2 bills in sums of $10, $20 and $50, all if you merely happen to slap into a lucky number.

Many number hunters, Dollar Dan has discovered, become discouraged after checking up the list once unsuccessfully, and let the bills go out of their hands.

Not right! Not right a-tall!

Isn't it worth a sawbuck, a twenty or half a hundred to spend three or four minutes each day in checking the numbers?

Sure it is!

RIFFS WIPE OUT FOREIGN LEGION

Bindaya, France, Sept. 19 (U.N.B.) —Spain's troubles with the troops both on the Moroccan battlefields and at home have filled Madrid with rumors that will not be silenced, according to travelers reaching this border town from there.

In spite of the rigid censorship on news of the army, reports of heavy losses in the field and at sea while travelers said refusal of troops to leave for Morocco was common talk.

Two battalions of the Spanish foreign legion were entirely wiped out in the recovery of Ben Karriachi, the height overlooking Tetuan, another Moroccan stronghold, according to word in Madrid.

An Asturias regiment quartered at Carabanchel, a suburb of Madrid, has chosen open revolt rather than shipment to Morocco, and the entire gendarmerie of the capital has been mobilized to supress outbreaks.

At Cebadilla on Alhucemas Bay the Spanish have been unable to advance, the reports said, because the heights dominating the Spanish position bristled with Riff artillery.

500 SLAIN BY FRENCH IN BATTLE WITH DRUSES

Beirut, Syria, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The Duebel Druse tribesmen are declared to have left 230 dead on the field after their attack against the French at Moussefire, fifteen miles southwest of Sueida, on Thursday. Prisoners taken by the French are quoted as saying the tribesmen numbering 3,000 from twenty-three villages lost 600 killed and an equal number wounded.

A Beirut dispatch last night, telling of the attack on Moussefire, also said the French garrison at Sueida was still beleaguered after holding off the tribesmen for forty-two days.

DARWIN'S SON, ENGLISH BARONET, IS DEAD

Cambridge, Eng., Sept. 19 (U.N.B.) —Sir Francis Darwin, son of Charles Robert Darwin, author of "The Origin of Species," died at his home here today.

Sir Francis has always been one of the staunchest supporters of the theories of evolution advanced by his father, which have caused worldwide controversy. Although he was graduated from some of the best medical schools of England, Sir Francis did not practice medicine but spent his early life aiding his father in research work at his home in Down, Kent.

WOMAN, 72, CONFESSES SHE IS A KLEPTOMANIAC

Portland, Me., Sept. 19. (A.P.)— Miss Annie Christianson, aged 72, who was ordered to keep out of department and chain stores here a week ago by Municipal Judge Clarence A. Peabody, was arraigned in his court again today, charged with the larceny of two ten-cent bars of soap from a store. Her case was continued until Wednesday.

On her fifth and last previous appearance on a similar charge, her attorney declared she was by her own admission a kleptomaniac.

LONE THUG SAYS HE IS "DUTCH" ANDERSON

Tippecanoe City, Ohio, Sept. 19 (U.N.B.) — Proclaiming himself George "Dutch" Anderson, a lone bandit held up Milton T. Staley, cashier of the Tippecanoe National Bank here and obtained $100.01.

The bandit entered the bank a few seconds after 4, just after the time clock on the vault containing several thousand dollars had been closed.

'SPARKS' WILL HONOR HERO FIREMAN

Organized Body Which Never Misses Blaze to Attend Medal Presentation

The "Sparks" are going to be there!

When you go to the Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common, in the noon hour next Wednesday, to see "Larry" Doyle of Ladder 8 decorated with the Boston Evening American's Diamond Medal, you will observe the zealous and indefatigable "Sparks," well down in front.

The "Sparks" are an organized body of civic-minded business and professional men who never miss a "big" fire. No matter what the hour, day or night, they always respond to a second alarm, anywhere in Boston.

ALWAYS THERE.

Like most of their fellow-citizens who will be on hand, the "Sparks" will be present on Wednesday not only to honor Ladderman Doyle, who saved four lives from the Pickwick Club disaster and was designated by the Board of Merit as the fireman who within a six months period performed the most meritorious act, but to pay homage to the entire department.

"Larry" Doyle does not know whether he will be able to make a speech or not, but he will positively appear in person and if he is unable to say more than "I thank you," his smile will be more eloquent than words. "Larry" has the most captivating smile between Somerville and Quincy.

Mrs. Doyle, the proud little wife and mother who rises at home and waits for her fireman, will be presented on behalf of this newspaper with $100 in gold.

BIG OCCASION.

It promises to be a big occasion. "Larry" will be brought to the stand by a picked escort of firemen, representing all the downtown fire houses.

There will be a band concert from 12 until 12:30 o'clock, and promptly at the latter minute Editor James T. Williams, Jr., of the Boston Evening American, will open the exercises by presenting the Hon. Alfred Davenport, prominent insurance underwriter, as chairman.

Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn will pay tribute to the fire-fighting forces of Boston, describing in particular the heroic work of more than 200 of them at the Pickwick Club.

MAYOR WILL SPEAK.

The orator of the day will be the Hon. James M. Curley, Mayor of Boston. The men and women, boys and girls of Boston, who from time to time read His Honor's speeches in the newspapers or hear him over the radio, will be glad to seize this noon-hour opportunity to hear one of New England's greatest living orators.

Mr. Curley will attach the Boston Evening American Diamond Medal to Ladderman Doyle's uniform coat. "Larry" will bow and smile, the Mayor will hand Mrs. Doyle her present of gold, the band will play "The Star-Spangled Banner" and everybody will go back to shop or office all the happier for an opportunity to let the men of the B. F. D. know in what high esteem they are held by their fellow citizens.

Next Wednesday at the noon hour! Parkman bandstand.

Boston Common.

All out!

DEFI TO G.O.P. ON COAL CRISIS

Springfield, Sept. 19 (U.N.B.)—Coal rationing in Massachusetts was today made an issue in a special Congressional election here by Representative Rolland D. Sawyer of Ware, Democratic candidate.

Representative Sawyer sent an open letter to Henry L. Shattuck of this city, who is the Republican nominee at the earnest solicitation of President Coolidge, calling on him to join in a pledge to the people to vote with Young "Bob" La Follette and the independent Republicans of the northwest to repeal the transportation act and move to put an article of interstate commerce, in commanding on coal rationing. Representative Sawyer said:

"We are to shiver and freeze in Massachusetts so Pennsylvania barons and New York bankers may add to their swollen fortunes. Will you, Mr. Bowles, if elected to Congress, vote with young Bob La Follette to repeal the act which discriminates against Massachusetts and this very district and for legislation which will put anthracite coal under Congressional regulation, and thus save the nation and especially your own State and district from the distress and disgrace of coal rationing?"

LETTERS WILL WIN AUTO FOR 2 CENTS

Best Reasons for Preference for Boston Evening American Will Win

By PACKARD BUICK ESSEX.

I want help.

I am trying to sell three automobiles at 2 cents apiece.

They are owned by the Boston Evening American.

The first is a Packard sedan, the second, a fully equipped Buick sedan, and the third, an Essex coach.

YOU may have your choice of these three cars if you will write and send in the most helpful letter I receive on the subject, "Why I Like the Boston Evening American".

ACT QUICKLY.

A mere letter of not more than 250 words—and two cents—and you may take any one of these cars and drive away in it.

The second car will become the property—for two cents—of the writer of the letter adjudged second best.

Third car goes to the person who sends in the letter considered to be third in merit.

Write your letter without delay if you desire to take part in this unique competition and, perhaps, become the proud owner of a luxurious Packard, a dandy Buick or a comfortable Essex automobile, for two coppers.

EMPLOYES BARRED.

No employe of this or any allied publication, and no member of the family of any such employe, may take part in this contest. Write your own name and address in the upper left-hand corner of your manuscript. Write on one side of the paper only. Be sure to stay within 250 words. Send your letter to "Mr. Packard Buick Essex," in care of the Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

Let me offer for your study another specimen letter, picked at random from amongst all that have come to me. The writer is a woman resident of Church street, Newton, Mass:

WHY I LIKE THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

Progress and daring! Youth, life, labor and thrills.

The old cloak of gentility which made invisible all thoughts beyond church and home is being replaced by the moving finger of progress. America is our oyster, and life an empty goblet to be filled. It is an age for thinkers, of truth.

The American fulfills our contract for learning. Those, like myself, denied a college education, find their needs gratified by the great teachers in Hygiene, Science, Philosophy and humor, afforded by the American. It has "dressed me in an opinion of wisdom, gravity and profound concett" because of its able editorial and other articles I have learned to discuss rationally and intelligently the topics of the hour.

I have the distinction of being the most original hostess of our set. A direct accomplishment gained through the "Household" column.

"Men are but children of a larger growth." The American offers the most unique and profitable form of entertainment—its contests. I won my first dollar through the American. I have won in six other American contests. Faith in its unimpeachable integrity!

It is the hope-chest of the hopeful; a paper of the people, for the people, and for the real, live, thinking folks who want their news FIRST, BEST, CLEANEST and UNBIGOTED.

Publication of the above letter does not mean that the Newton lady is once again the winner of an Evening American competition. Nor, on the other hand, does it mean that she may not be a winner.

LETTERS PILING UP

The letters still are piling up. The hour has not yet arrived when we must begin the Herculean task of weeding them out, digging for the jewels which will be put aside for further consideration.

But time flies, men and brethren, and you may be sure of one thing:

SEND NO MONEY.

Never again, while water runs, fire burns, the sun shines, birds sing and politicians make pretty promises will you have an opportunity like this.

Three, new automobiles. 2 cents apiece!

Once again, send no money with your letter.

Only the winners pay!

They must pay 2 CENTS APIECE

WAKEFIELD WILL VOTE ON BECOMING A CITY

A special town meeting has been called in Wakefield for October 19 to vote on whether Wakefield shall become a city and what form of government shall be adopted. A special committee will report and the call is inserted in the warrant, so action may be taken at once.

Aerial Thrills

Sergeant Randle Boes, army's daredevil flier, snapped in death-defying parachute leap from airplane by International News Reel. Photos show Boes as he jumped from plane and dropped to earth. His stunt was to keep his parachute unopened until he was almost to the ground, thus proving that failing from a great height does not kill a man. He waited until he had dropped 1,500 feet—a record mark—before he used it. These pictures go on view Monday in all Greater Boston theatres showing I. N. S. films.

PHONE COMPANY HOPES TO GET EVEN MORE

Isn't Satisfied With the $8,640,000 Increase in the Rates Recently

Here's a bit of ingratitude.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company isn't satisfied with the $8,640,000 in increased rates recently allowed by the Public Utilities Comission of Massachusetts.

It wanted more, and hopes to get it.

"If the experience of a year indicates that the estimates of the commissioners were too low, we may ask to have the present rates increased."

That is how much sympathy it has for its subscribers especially those in the position of the poor widow whose plight was called to the attention of the Housekeepers' Club.

SHOULD ASK "PARENT."

The widow said her son, who has a family had put a telephone in her home in order to keep posted as to her health and to give her diversion, but that it would have to be removed as he could not meet the new rates.

Subscribers feel that if the New England Company needed money in an emergency it should have been tided over by its opulent parent, the American Telephone & Telegraph Company which controls the telephone business of the country and has assets worth $1,400,000,000, and not "weed" the purses of the people who make its existence possible.

The threat that it will demand even a higher rate at the expiration of the first year of the new schedule is published in the latest issue of "Telephone Topics."

In this article the New England company complains that "to the extent that the increased revenue asked for was reduced, the report was a disappointment," and, in the same breath, admits that the commission "gave us about 90 per cent. of what we asked."

SMACKS OF PROPAGANDA.

The whole trend of the article headed "Progress in Rate Hearings," smacks of propaganda designed to pretend to employes and their families who read "Telephone Topics," that the company regretted not having been granted its full demand, and primarily it is chuckling over the generosity of the Public Utilities Commission.

And why not, when within a few months of the experts declaring to the commission that $1,100,000 additional revenue would be sufficient, it drew a second bouncing petition from its sleeve requesting $13,500,000 additional revenue and was presented with close to $9,000,000 in Massachusetts.

In the face of that legerdemain there is no room for genuine disappointment on the part of the New England Telephone Company, the wail in "Telephone Topics" notwithstanding.

CHILEAN MONSIGNOR RAPS IMMODEST GOWNS

Santiago, Chile, September 19 (A.P.)—The ban on ultra modern styles of dress worn by women has extended to Chile. Monsignor Errazuriz, Archbishop of Santiago, has issued a letter censuring the dress of women in Chile and Buenos Aires and recommending that immodestly dressed women be refused admission to the churches.

"Unashamed of their immodest dress," said the letter, "the Chilean women, whose manners formerly were an example to all Christian families, go so far as to have themselves photographed in these creations and send their pictures to the newspapers.

FIRES 3 SHOTS AT FLEEING RUNNERS

Motorcycle Policeman Catches One and Liquor After Wild Brighton Chase

A wild ride through the streets of Watertown and Brighton with two rum runners, during which three shots were fired, was the experience today of Motorcycle Policeman Donahue of station 14, Brighton.

During the chase one man made his escape, while the other, who was captured, gave his name as David Schezzer. He informed the police his companion was known as Roland LaRose of Brookline. One hundred gallons of high-grade liquor, which gave evidence of having been buried in a vault, were in the machine.

Residents along the North Beacon street section have been complaining for some time about the liquor traffic through that district. At the time of the arrest Donahue was off duty. The two men were driving a Lincoln car and the arrested man told the police they were returning from Canada.

After stopping the machine Donahue called for Sergeant Wallingford of station 4 to drive the car back to the station. It was during this ride that La Rose made his escape. Donahue fired three shots, none of which found their mark.

WED MONTH, HE SEEKS DIVORCE

Married a month ago, John S. Davis of Quincy, seeks a divorce from Eleanor K. Davis of Medford. He says a month was long enough to demonstrate that she was cruel and abusive. At the other extreme, Herbert N. Monk of Natick is seeking a divorce from Anna J. Monk of Cambridge, saying she deserted him after twenty-eight years of fairly happy married life.

These and seventeen others have just filed divorce libels with the registrar of probate of Norfolk County.

Among the others are Mary A. Travers of Walpole vs. John J. Travers, cruelty; William E. Goss of Quincy vs. Rosie Rose of Syracuse, N. Y., desertion; Charles H. Manser of Needham vs. Elizabeth L. Manser of Quincy, cruelty; Esther M. Van Wagner of Brookline vs. Hyman Van Wagner of Weymouth, desertion; Ruth F. Hersey of Williams vs. Wilbur A. Hersey of North Attleboro, cruelty; Mary A. M. Chokey of Brookline vs. Joseph B. Chokey of Brookline, desertion and neglect to provide; Dorothy M. Quincy, cruelty and non-support; Carol L. Crawford of Brookline vs. Ethan A. Crawford of Brookline, cruelty; Ethel Clevelly of Quincy vs. Reinhold Clevelly of Washington, D. C., cruelty and desertion.

Hazel M. Robinson of Stoughton vs. Marion E. Holbrook of Montclair, N. J., desertion; Lydia M. Patterson of Weymouth vs. Axel G. Danielson of Weymouth, cruelty and intemperance; Joseph J. Brindley of Dedham vs. Alice E. Brindley of Wrentham, cruelty and desertion; Madeline E. Reber of Boston vs. Andrew J. Reber of Mattapan, cruelty; Peter J. Dolan of Quincy vs. Henry B. Lynch of Quincy, annulment of marriage; Grace W. Davidson of Needham vs. Harold W. Davidson of Wessaguscus, cruelty; Peter J. Dolan of Brookline vs. Gertrude V. Dolan of Revere, desertion and cruelty.

CONFESSES SLAYING "EVIL EYE WOMAN"

Jamestown, N. Y., Sept. 19.—After questioning three suspects, Jamestown police today said the mystery of the murder of Mrs. Liboria Speranza, known as the "evil eye woman" and investigation of a dismembered body was found in Chadakoin River, had been solved by confession of Frank Seriano.

Seriano said he was at a friend's house when the woman passed and the party jeered her. She picked up a knife and hit him. Angered, he overtook her, and, with a safety razor blade, wounded her on the face and neck. Her head was nearly severed from the body. A cross was cut on her face and her mouth slit from ear to ear.

"HIGHWAY ROBBERY"

That is what the housewives of Greater Boston and the State call the new schedule of increased rates granted the telephone company. Fight the injustice and rebuke the Public Utilities Commission by signing this petition and thus register your personal protest.

TELEPHONE PETITION

TO GOVERNOR FULLER:

We, the undersigned, subscribers of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, voice our protest against the increase of rates for telephone service as granted by the Public Utilities Commission of Massachusetts, and petition that the former schedule of rates be restored immediately.

Things That Make Us All Weep.
"Buddy" Stuart of the Fenway is to be moved into a bigger job in the New York offices of Famous Players. The patrons of the theatre will miss his cordial greeting, his exuberant good nature and that winning smile. He leaves a hole hard to fill.

STAGE AND SCREEN

"Miracle" Dromios Hard at Work.
The forthcoming engagement of "The Miracle" at the Boston Opera House is being exploited in detail by Wendell Phillips Dodge and Oliver M. Saylor, tireless writers of art from old Broadway. Headquarters have been set up in the Little Building.

LIFE OF EASE MEANS NOTHING TO COHAN

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE return of George M. Cohan in a play by himself and for himself merely adds new interest to a season safely launched and comfortably promising. Mr. Cohan's own conduct in the theatre always is happily stimulating. It would be too commonplace to refer to his works as interesting—that stage has long since passed. If there is any single item of activity that stands out in the Cohanesque catalogue it is an abiding desire for retirement from artistic toil and care—a hope that apparently is matched only by an equally persistent willingness to return to the old spotlight when Duty sends forth her summons.

TAKING things as they run in the theatre, Mr. Cohan unquestionably retires oftener and returns quicker than anyone the stage has ever known. There may be others but the lists do not record them—not, at least, on our domestic calendar. Mr. Cohan will on Monday give the Hollis a better start upon a new theatrical year than that old and respected playhouse has enjoyed for years. With "American Born" he will again affect a return to the dual undertaking of actor and playwright. Already there are signs that the engagement will set up new records—both for the actor and for the playhouse. Retirement by George Cohan necessarily stirs speculation, for none of the men who have wrested a fortune from the theatre have been so closely identified with its many branches. Doubtless Mr. Cohan is sincere in his efforts to live the life of a gentleman at ease, but it may be questioned whether he possesses the temperament to do this successfully. Contented loafing is not for all men, and those who know him best are dead certain that Cohan is not cut out for it. In any event, speculation for the moment is arrested and Mr. Cohan is back on the job he loves so well—acting a sturdy American among dull-witted Britishers.

GEORGE M. COHAN
He may retire—but he always comes back.

NEW ORDER OF THINGS IN MOTION PICTURE PRESENTATION IS ABOUT TO SHOW ITSELF

FURTHER signs of a colorful season are indicated in the determination to open the new Metropolitan Theatre early in October. The wholesale movement of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation into the theatre field of New England will bring new faces and new policies to more than sixty theatres in this corner of the nation, and Adolph Zukor, chiefly known to movie patrons only through the sight of his name on Paramount film titles, now flares forth as the monarch of the largest group of playhouses in eastern Massachusetts. A new order of things in motion picture presentation will mark the opening of the new Metropolitan, for supplementing the films, which for the greater part, of course, will be Paramount pictures, there will be stage settings and incidental entertainment designed by John Murray Anderson, who created the Greenwich Village Follies, an orchestral arrangement that will utilize fifty-five skilled musicians and other novelties designed to place the new theatre on an artistic equality with the great film palaces of New York, Chicago and the West Coast cities. All this, we are told, has been the dream of Adolph Zukor, who sits at the biggest and most important desk in the Famous Players organization. A glance at the luxurious approaches, costly fittings and almost endless chambers built for the comfort of those who make their way to the Metropolitan suggests for once, anyway, that dreams do come true.

He's going to have a pretty big theatre in Boston.

AMOROUS PIRATE GIVES WILLIAM FARNUM CHANCE TO DISPLAY NEW BRAND OF TALENT

AMONG artists of varied talents it always has been good sport to leap back and forth between film and stage. No season passes without its list of ambitious movie players who yield to the temptations held out by silent Broadway managers. William Farnum for years escaped this lure and plodded earnestly and faithfully before the amber lights of the studio or sweltered on "location" in open desert spaces. There may have been no concentrated applause in this fidelity, but there was other recompense. That Farnum listened to Arthur Hopkins—listened intently. The return of Mr. Farnum to the speaking stage in the Maxwell Anderson-Laurence Stallings romance of the Spanish main is not without keen playgoer interest, for these are the young men whose "What Price Glory" gave New York its deepest thrill last season. In another week local playgoers will have an opportunity to compare the frankness of the latter piece with "The Buccaneer," now serving Mr. Farnum at the Tremont.

WILLIAM FARNUM
Rugged lover of movies, now takes to stage.

No words are minced in either play, though "The Buccaneer" undoubtedly is more subtle in its expositions. There is plenty of romance involved in the conquests of that old sea rover, Henry Morgan, who, regardless of the job at hand, held a abiding affection for the ladies. The twin authors of "The Buccaneer" have concerned themselves much with Morgan's interest in a pretty face than his desire for loot. Mr. Farnum takes his authors at their word; nimbly he flits from one sweet amile to another; frankly he confesses to one fair senorita the depth of his affair with her friend and companion. He's an ardent wooer, this Morgan, undaunted by numbers or by situation. His many years of hard service in filmland has surely taught William Farnum how to make love—even in piratical disguise.

"Rose-Marie" at the Majestic. (Twenty-fourth week.) Doing very well, thank you.

"The Fool" at Tremont Temple. (Third week.) Gripping melodrama built around the Golden Rule. Final week.

Jazz Goes Into High Plane With Jayne Auburn

"I may seem overly ambitious to those who have regarded the subject casually, but I claim for jazz that it is the only purely native art created for America. It is the folk song of our nation." Thus affirms Jayne Auburn, of "My Girl," at the Wilbur Theatre. "I know full well," continues Miss Auburn, that for years jazz has been a thing outside the pale, a stroller in the realm of music.

Jayne Auburn

"To my mind, however, jazz, which is so full of conventions, technicalities and musical laws, gives the widest opportunity to present actual drama in musical form."

Speed-Boy Author Writes "Gorilla" In Three Days

Ralph Spence, the author of the laugh-making mystery play, "The Gorilla," at the Plymouth, was in turn theatre treasurer, newspaper man, writer of captions for pictures, scenario writer, publicity man and maker of sketches for "The Follies" and other light entertainment.

Just to show that Mr. Spence is no novice he was part author of the sketches which appeared in 1921, 1922 and of the Zeigfeld Frolic, with which Will Rogers went on tour. Mr. Spence also wrote some of the sketches in the first of "The Earl Carroll Vanities. He wrote "The Gorilla" on a bet as to how fast a play could be written. He finished it in three days.

"My parents are not of the stage but the blood of the theatre is in me," says Edna Leedom, comedienne in the new Ziegfeld Follies, coming to the Colonial. "William H. Wallis, my great uncle, was for two score years an actor associated with Mrs. John Drew. John Wallis, my uncle, founded a New York dramatic weekly, long the recognized organ of the theatrical profession.

Edna Leedom

"Upon leaving the John Meade School, in Philadelphia, I sang in a church choir. I have read every worth while book about the stage, and already have learned not to misspell the names of John McCullough and E. H. Sothern. The latter has had his name wrong in electric lights and newspapers. The former needn't worry. He has been too long dead."

WHO'S WHO AND ALL THAT

Have you ever met Father Whalen—that is—the Father Whalen of Anne Nichols' record breaking riot of laughter, Abie's Irish Rose," which opens at the Castle Square Theatre in another week? He is Thomas McGrath, an actor of the old school, who has for many years Thomas McGrath played nothing but parts of this sort, with Chauncey Olcott, Fiske O'Hara and other stars of the Irish drama, and was at one time a member of the late Charles Frohman's forces.

Mr. McGrath is a native of Boston, having attended the public schools here as a boy, and received his first knowledge of the theatrical business in the old Boston Museum stock company, in which he was a fixture.

But Few Soft Words in This Play of the Marines

On every count, "What Price Glory," the world-famous play that Arthur Hopkins is sending to the Wilbur theatre on Monday, September 28, is a new departure in war dramas. It has no heroics, in fact no discernible hero, heroine or villain. There are no flags, no bands, no fond farewells, no stirring patriotic flights. The talk is true doughboy talk. The characters are drawn from life by a man who served six years in the Marine Corps. One of the authors, Laurence Stallings, lost a leg over the top at Belleau Wood. Jack Roslegh plays the hardboiled captain of Marines.

Jack Roslegh

"Abie," Long Awaited, Now Only One Week Away

Preparations are being rushed for the re-opening on Monday, September 28, of the Castle Square Theatre with "Abie's Irish Rose."

Theatregoers of Greater Boston are keenly interested in the coming to this city of "Abie's Irish Rose," for praise of the play has been heard here for several years. It was more than four years ago that the comedy was first presented in New York City. Before the first performance theatrical critics were frankly sceptical about the success of the play. But the author and producer, Anne Nichols, was confident that it would be a success and her confidence was justified by the enthusiastic reception which "Abie's Irish Rose" received. From the opening performance until now the play has been breaking all previous attendance records.

Florence Vidor Has Real Struggle With Fame

Florence Vidor, who plays the featured role in the production "The Trouble With Wives," at the Orpheum next week, is one of the newer screen celebrities who had to battle her way to the top, step by step. After many futile efforts to get an engagement she finally persuaded Vitagraph to add her to its payroll at a very small salary, but did not get a part for eight months. One of her first important roles was in the Dickens' classic "A Tale of Two Cities." From then on the directors seemed to recognize her ability and she became in constant demand.

Six Doubles Walk In Upon Gloria's Biggest Scene

Has every star her double in Hollywood? Yes. And yes, again! Most of them have two or more doubles. Not doubles who really double for them, but merely doubles who resemble them to a striking extent, because the day of doubles is gone. Gloria Swanson discovered that she had six of them in a massquerade sequence of her latest picture "The Cost of Folly," which comes to Loew's State next week.

Gloria Swanson

Added Weight Makes Eva Certain In Comedy

Eva Davenport, president of the "Waddlees Club," and who is seen in the role of the Duchess Anastasia in "The Student Prince," coming to the Shubert, has sung and played in nearly every part of the globe.

Miss Davenport has had a long experience on the stage, but whatever she is in years, she remains young in spirit. At one time she sang in grand opera as a coloratura soprano, and headed her own company. While a success in opera, her wish is always to appear in comedy parts. When she began to take on pounds, she had her ambition gratified.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

HOLLIS—George M. Cohan in his own comedy, "American Born." Farcical in treatment, dealing with English and American life. The scenes are laid in Harrow, England. The supporting cast includes H. Cooper Cliff, Lawrence D'Orsay, Ralph Locke, Arnold Lucy, Joan Maclean, Alice McDermott and Claire Mersereau.

SHUBERT—"The Student Prince," an operetta devised from Richard Mansfield's successful play, "Old Heidelberg." Book and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly; score by Sigmund Romberg. In the cast are De Wolf Hopper, James Liddy, Odette Lauriner, Eva Davenport, Lucyenne Herval and Edward D'Orsay. Ralph by J. C. Huffman. Produced by the Shuberts.

COLONIAL—Ziegfeld Follies, a musical revue staged and delivered in the familiar fashion of such things. The cast is headed by W. C. Fields and Ray Dooley, supported by Tom Lewis, Irving Fisher, Clarence Nordstrom, Edna Leedum, Dave Stamper, Kelo Brothers, Dane and Wahl and the Tiller Girls. Also 65 Ziegfeld choristers. Staged by Julian Mitchell.

FENWAY—(Starting today) "A Son of His Father," adapted from the Harold Bell Wright story. Featured in the cast are Bessie Love, Warner Baxter and Raymond Hatton. Directed by Victor Fleming. A Paramount picture. The companion film is "Without Mercy."

COPLEY—(Starting tonight) "Captain X," a farce that has won approval in England. First time in America. In the cast are E. E. Clive, Terence Neill, May Ediss, Alan Mowbray, Richard Whorf, Catherine Standing, Wordley Hulse, Jessamine Newcombe, Espeth Dudgeon and Victor Tandy. Staged by Mr. Clive.

SOMERVILLE—(Stock) "The Best People," an American comedy by Avery Hopwood and David Gray. In the cast are Marjorie Foster, Arthur Chatterden, Lillian Wickwell, Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Mark Kent, Douglas Hunter and De Forest Dawleyis. Staged by Tom Magrane.

LONE HAND IS GEST'S LOCAL GESTURE

There is so much genuine news centered on the coming of "The Miracle" to the Boston Opera House on October 28th that Morris Gest has found it necessary to establish headquarters in the Little Building, out of which will pour items of interest concerning this biggest "show" that has ever moved upon Boston. Lady Diana Manners, whose talents are given to the principal role, has just arrived from England and is already preparing for the opening performances of the drama in Cincinnati on during the present month.

Lady Diana Manners

Boston alone, according to Mr. Gest's advices will have "The Miracle" without the financial guarantee given in other cities.

"The Miracle" was born at the Olympia, London, in 1911, where it played to 30,000 people a day. It then was produced with great triumph in Berlin, Stockholm, Vienna and in fifteen other European capitals. Finally, through the combined efforts of Otto H. Kahn, the great New York banker, and Mr. Gest, "The Miracle" was staged in New York, in the Century Theatre. It played there for ten months, during which time the box office receipts were $2,300,000.

From Boston, at the conclusion of the engagement on December 5, "The Miracle" will go to St. Louis, where the Municipality has raised a fund of $325,000 for it to be presented there for four weeks.

When Booth Gave Bradbury A Much Needed Lift

That great old character actor, George Wilson, dropped in on his old friend, James Bradbury, comedian of "Duty" at the New Park Theatre, and discussed the days when Wilson was one of the greatest character men in the country and played at the Boston Museum, and when Bradbury was what is known as a utility man.

James Bradbury

Mr. Bardbury recalled that he had done the second player in "Hamlet," to Edwin Booth's Melancholy Dane. In those days no matter what the play, it had but two days rehearsal, and on the first performance Mr. Bradbury lost his lines. There was the great Booth lying on the stage beside Ophelia and wiggling so that the audience could not see him, threw Bradbury his line.

Later on when Bradbury tried to apologize, Mr. Booth said: "That's all right, Bradbury, everybody does it."

Sousa Finds Americans Want Snappy Music

"Make It Snappy" is the watchword of the American music public," says Lieut. Comr. John Philip Sousa, who comes with his Band to Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27. Each season he finds that the thousands who hear his programs in all sections of America demand more action and more novelty—but principally more action. More numbers and shorter ones, is their slogan.

"The musician should remember that the people who attend his entertainments are the people who dance to jazz music, attend the movies, get their news from the headlines, go out to lunch and get back to their offices in fifteen minutes, and drive sixty mile an hour in an automobile enroute to the place where they expect to loaf all day," says Sousa.

Will Rogers Is Stepping Out.
An early visitor at Symphony Hall will be Will Rogers, who will bring his drolleries to Boston as an added attraction to the third Steinert concert. His companions will be the DeRiszke Singers, with whom the program will be divided.

STAGE AND SCREEN

McConville Moves Into Bigger Job.
In the shifting of personnel in the local Famous Players office since the absorption of the Gordon theatres, John P. McConville, the Paramount exploitation expert, now finds himself general press representative of all the houses in this group.

VERDI REVIVAL FINDS WARM WELCOME

Last night at the Opera House the Boston Opera Company "revived" Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," an opera that has not been heard in Boston for many years.

This work, which is very popular elsewhere is for the most part unfamiliar in Boston.

Some of the arias, which are plentiful, are well known, however, through their introduction into the concert hall.

The production last night was rather uneven. Dramatically the piece was well presented; it was evident that much pains had been taken to maintain the continuity.

Some of the characters, too, were very worthy set forth. Blanche Saroya was a lovely Leonora. Her voice was in splendid form, and her acting was thoroughly artistic. Her long aria in the convent scene was sung in gorgeous voice, and was deservedly applauded enthusiastically. To Miss Saroya was due much of the success of the presentation.

Manuel Salazar was an acceptable Alvaro. He sang in his usual fashion and with particularly effective emotional acting.

Stella Demette as Preziosilla contributed to the spirited scene in the Inn. The balance of the cast was effective.

This afternoon the eternal favorite of the operatic stage, "La Boheme," will be presented, with Miss Saroya as Mimi. A week of opera above the usual standard will be brought to a close with the evening performance of "Il Trovatore."

MUSIC NOTES

The Somerville Theatre orchestra, under the leadership of Albert J. Beltelami, will broadcast its regular program through WNAC every Tuesday evening, playing from 7:45 to 8:15 o'clock.

* * *

Blanche Washburn has been engaged for another season as director of the orchestra at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

* * *

Early concerts at Symphony Hall will include Elena Gerhardt, mezzo-soprano, on Wednesday, October 14; John McCormack on Tuesday evening, October 20, and Mischa Elman on Sunday afternoon, November 1.

Clive Wins Spurs as Actor Under Frohman Banner

E. E. Clive

E. E. Clive, managing director of the Copley Theatre, is a native of Wales, England. He made his initial professional appearance in 1902 in "The White Heather," a Drury Lane spectacular drama in which Mrs. John Wood was featured. His first appearance in this country was made in 1911 in Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Two years later he paid his first visit to Boston as a member of Arthur Wing Pinero's "Mind the Paint Girl." He has been continuously in Boston since 1918, the past two seasons as the responsible head of the Copley Theatre organization.

Steinert Concert Series Start with Ponselle

As in previous years, Albert Steinert again announces a series of five concerts, to be given at Symphony Hall during the forthcoming winter months, three on Sunday afternoons, and two on week-day evenings. Rosa Ponselle, in Mr. Steinert's first offering for Sunday afternoon, October 11. The second concert, on Wednesday evening, October 21, is by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, the Dutch conductor, and will have for soloist, Mme. Maria Dormont, a Russian singer.

MISS ADIE BRIDE OF LIEUT. PORTER IN LONDON

Miss Andrea Wright Adie of Chestnut Hill and Lieut. George Porter Hunter, U. S. N., attached to the U. S. Destroyer Preston, now in port in London, were married at fashionable St. George's, Hanover Square, London, today. The honeymoon will be brief, for Lieut. Hunter is due to sail Monday for Gibraltar.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Adie of Chestnut Hill, is among the most prominent members of the younger set. She is a member of the Junior League, the Sewing Circle and the Vincent Club.

Lieut. Hunter was graduated from Annapolis in 1923 and has since been attached to the Preston at the Charlestown Navy yard. He is the son of Mrs. E. P. Hunter of Harrisburgh, Pa.

Lieut. and Mrs. Hunter will reside at Tunis for the winter.

Why I Wrote "Show-Off"

By GEORGE KELLY

George Kelly

Critics of the drama have long been deploring the lack of realism in the theatre. The long arm of coincidence seems to play a proportionately larger part in the average play of today than the long arm of reality.

I studied the life of the neighbors about me, not with a view of putting them upon the stage, but rather with a view towards studying human nature. It was only after I sought to find replicas of such people upon the stage that I came to the conclusion that either they were not wanted in the theatre or that the dramatists were blind to the pulsating lives of the people all about them. "The Show-Off" was conceived as a result of these mental perambulations.

Aubrey Piper, the show-off, is not a creation of my brain as Sherlock Holmes was of Doyle's, or Rip Van Winkle of Irving's. I have known any number of Aubrey Pipers not only in Philadelphia, whence this particular Aubrey Piper hails, but I have met him in New York city, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and virtually every big city and small city in the country.

The trouble with the Aubrey Pipers of America today is that they force themselves upon us, marry girls from fine families who fall for the lure of their clothes and talk and are insufferable bores to everybody but the girls who dote on them and themselves.

Mayor of Quincy Pays Highest Income Tax

The majority of Massachusetts mayors devote their entire time and attention to the duties of their offices according to the records of the Collector of Internal Revenue in the Park Square Building.

Mayoral salaries are included in the group of non-taxable incomes and the files reveal that the 39 carrying the title "His Honor" only 13 paid a Federal income tax in 1924.

Perley E. Barbour, Quincy's chief executive and the owner of the Barbour Welting Company of Brockton wrote the largest check, $43,448.04. Other mayors paid as follows:

Let them suggest that Satan in his wickedness, to help his friend Darwin, manufactured those fossils artificially and put them in the earth to deceive men.

THAT WAS the explanation given by the good Christian missionary, Father Hue, early in the last century when he went to Thibet, and discovered with horror, Buddhism, a religion much older than Christianity, and evidently a parody on the Christian religion.

That Thibetan religion, started by the Indian Prince Gautana, included a trinity, miraculous "immaculate" birth, and other features of the real religion.

STAGGERED at first, the good missionary soon understood the situation. It was clear that Satan, knowing what the Christian religion would say, went to Asia and inspired the Pagans there to start a ridiculous imitation of the Christian religion, hoping that its existence BEFORE Christianity would interfere with Christianity's success.

WE KNOW, however, that nothing COULD interfere with the success of Christianity, and we rejoice in that knowledge.

Similarly we know that nothing could change the opinion of the gentlemen that discharged Professor Scopes from his job in Tennessee. Satan may deceive many but he cannot deceive them. And after all, truth prevails in the long run.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAMS, first class American pilot, sent a stubby little airplane of steel, brass, wood and canvas through the air at the rate of 302 miles an hour yesterday. He beat the world's record held by a Frenchman, Bonnet, by 24 miles an hour.

Williams intends to strip a few things from the machine, to make it lighter and go faster. If he, lives until then, he will probably win the big air race.

HOWEVER, canvas and wood should play no important part in air machines intended for such speed. Two hundred miles an hour in an all-metal plane would be of more value to flying than four hundred miles an hour in a mothlike machine depending on canvas.

YESTERDAY'S demonstration shows that we have the pilots, even if we haven't got the machines.

Langley and the Wright brothers, Americans, were able to create the flying machines. Thousands of young Americans are ready to fly them, if the government will give them the chance.

IN WALL STREET yesterday the Stock Exchange closed half an hour early for the funeral of Seymour L. Cromwell, three times president of the Stock Exchange.

He was a good business man and deserved the unusual honor. But Mr. Cromwell needn't have been buried yesterday had he read the advice in this column.

"Always wear a derby hat of heavy felt when you go horseback riding and are past fifty years of age."

MR. CROMWELL, like 99 per cent. of middle-aged men that ride, rode in a soft hat. He fell, he struck on his head, and was killed. The right kind of riding hat, especially made with an air cushion in the crown, would have saved his life.

Mr. Smith, one of the ablest presidents the New York Central ever had, was killed in the same way.

Middle-aged men take notice.

Wedding Bells Peal Forth in Brookline Church Today

Much Social Distinction Surrounds Marriage of Mrs. Martha W. Bigelow to Theodore Lyman Eliot

Betty Alden

(Photograph by Bachrach.)

MRS. CHARLES P. GREENOUGH, 2d, lends the distinction of her name to the Girl Scouts and their good works, especially their Old Ship Shop and Tea Room, in Newbury street.

RADIANT IN WHITE SATIN, adorned with rare and exquisite old French lace, Miss Martha W. Bigelow this afternoon, in Brookline's First Parish Church, became Mrs. Theodore Lyman Eliot, in the first town ceremonial of Autumn's long and brilliant nuptial list. The bride, charming and pretty as a picture, surrounded herself with attendants, each distinctly attractive.

THERE WAS MISS MARY OTIS, Miss Margery Richardson, Miss Ruth Bremer, Miss Mary Hopkinson, Miss Hannah Hallowell, Miss Edith Parker, Miss Margaret Warner, Mrs. Leighton Brewer (Helen Hamlin) and Miss Gladys Bigelow, decked out in lovely chiffon frocks of tender green and wearing very large droopy hats of black velvet. They carried arm bouquets of cosmos.

YOUNG COLLEGE MEN figured prominently in the masculine staff. Lowell Thompson, of Cambridge, was best man; Albert G. Bigelow, 3d; Hugh W. Bigelow, Charles W. Eliot, 2d; Thomas H. Eliot (representing the two families); William H. Gratwick, Jr., from Gotham; Perry D. Trafford, Jr., of Short Hills, N. J., and a local foursome—John P. Hubbard, Charles Walcott, Charles Dunbar and George P. Baker, served as ushers.

TWO CLERGYMEN OFFICIATED, the Rev Abbot Peterson of the First Parish and the Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, the bridegroom's father. Young Mr. Eliot, Harvard, 1924, member of the university's exclusive clubs, takes his bride to Gotham. Their new home is in downtown "Old New York," No. 44 West Tenth street.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT F. BIGELOW are the bride's parents. The bride, whose advent into the social vortex dates back but a year or so, moves blithely in smart feminine circles, as a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club.

HIGH LIGHTS of diplomacy, big wigs of officialdom, the flower of society and the service, all are on the guest list for Tuesday's brilliant function, the ball given by the British Minister, Henry Getty Chilton, Mrs. Chilton and members of the Embassy staff.

PRECEDING THE BALL there's a large dinner at the British Embassy in Manchester, with these same Embassy personages as hosts. Later everyone flocks over to the hospitable Essex Country Club house for the ball. There'll be much of the glamor of gold lace and insignia, ribbons and decorations gracing the ballroom.

HIGH RANKING officers of the American and British Navy will be there. The British cruiser Calcutta, in command of Vice-Admiral Sir James Ferguson, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., and the U.S.S Detroit, with Rear-Admiral A. L. Willard, U. S. N., will be in Gloucester Harbor. These officers are bidden to the festivities with their richly uniformed staffs.

MRS. GASPAR G. BACON of Jamaica Plan was hostess this afternoon to a happy group of children at the Boston Opera House for the San Carlo presentation of "La Boheme." She gathered some fifty little ones from the Home for Crippled Children under her philanthropic wing and gave them a musical treat. Much of Mrs. Bacon's time is devoted to childish welfare and the making happier of little unfortunates.

MOTHER SEEKS MISSING SON

The mother and sister of Dominick Madden, formerly of Boston, are anxiously seeking word from the young man, who disappeared from this city fourteen years ago and has been heard from only once since that time.

Mrs. Burns

Madden is described as being 34 years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and of dark complexion. He has brown eyes, black hair and a full face.

Madden came over from Ireland shortly before his disappearance and was engaged in working around hotels, having been employed at the Essex for a time.

He became dissatisfied with Boston and left the city. No word came for years, until last October, when his folks received a letter from the young man stating that he was ill in a hospital at Buffalo and was planning to go to Ontario for his health.

Letters failed to reach him since then, and both sister and mother are worried about the man and want him home.

His mother's name is Margaret Redington Madden, and his sister, Catherine, is now married and lives at No. 13 Winchester street, Boston. Her name is Mrs. Patrick Burns. Any news of Madden would be appreciated by both sister and mother.

THIRTY OF REICHSTAG TO ATTEND U. S. MEETING

Berlin, Sept. 19 (A.P.)—Thirty members and ex-members of the German Reichstag, including president or Speaker Paul Loebe, will take part in the twenty-third conference of the Inter-parliamentary Union at Washington, beginning October 1. Most of them left Bremen on the steamer Bremen today.

WILBUR'S AIDE DEFIES DEATH CHARGES

Port Orchard, Wash., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—T. Douglas Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is ready to stand trial for murder, as one of those responsible, if it is true that the Shenandoah was unfit when it started on its ill-fated voyage, then those responsible for its condition should not only be put out of office, but tried for murder as well, as one of those responsible, stand ready for such a trial at any time," he said.

"Since the loss of the Shenandoah some have said that the ship was not fit to make the trip. The Shenandoah was as fit for that voyage as any ship that is sent out upon the sea from the Bremerton Navy Yard. You people at the Navy Yard wouldn't send a ship to sea if you thought it would sink. Neither did we send the Shenandoah forth, thinking that it might fall. The Shenandoah met unusual air conditions and it fell, just as any ship from this navy yard might meet a typhoon and sink."

AMERICAN BORN

Frank Archer says

GEORGE M. COHAN

THE above is the title of a new play to have its premiere opening at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, Mass. It is from the pen of George M Cohan who will play one of the principal roles. Mr. Cohan is unquestionably one of the most versatile playwrights, actors and managers of the American Stage. He has been missed during his vacation by millions of theatregoers who very justly feel that Mr. Cohan is in a class by himself in furnishing them with that clean, wholesome entertainment which they so much seek. The return of America's most popular idol in producing and acting will be an event, which his millions of admirers will prove by their enormous patronage. Nobody can gainsay but what "American Born" will go over with a bang.

American Born seems so appropriate to the wonderful beverage MOXIE, that clean, wholesome, refreshing tonic which so many have stamped as the Standard Family Beverage, the conception of which was American Born from the formula of the late Dr. Augustin Thompson, who for many, many years handled a large and ever-growing practice at Lowell, Mass. As a result he grasped the necessity of a clean, wholesome beverage of tonic and pure food qualities which would be good at all times, in all places and under all sorts of climatic and other conditions.

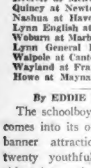
The schoolboy football season comes into its own today. Ten banner attractions will bring twenty youthful gridiron machines into action and it will be on this occasion that every lad will get his first taste of football. The official opening of the 1925 scholastic season promises to give the followers of the game all the action they seek.



Eddie Dondero

From the time the referee sounds the opening whistle today until taps are sounded next November, the royal rooters will be found talking about this and that player. Cross word puzzles in their most puzzling forms have nothing on a schoolboy football fan. As the season comes to an end several upsets cause much comment in scholastic ranks.

Malden High's plucky gridiron warriors, State champions a year ago, will pry the lid off, with Watertown as their opponents, at the Malden stadium. Despite the loss of nine veterans, the hard-working coached brigade should cut quite a figure this season and Malden fans are backing them to the limit.

James Mansfield's Haverhill High school eleven will act as host to the Nashua, N. H. outfit at the Haverhill High stadium and this game promises to furnish plenty of thrills. Just how the Haverhill team will shape up is hard telling, but since Mansfield took the reins the natives have started to look forward to a successful season.

Medford High, with a heavy and shifty team, entertains Winchester at the Fulton street grounds, Medford. The Medfordites expect to get a good work-out in the opener and consider Winchester an easy victim. On the following week Brockton will give them all the action they want at the Keith Memorial Field, Brockton.

However, Medford may upset the dope.

Quincy High invades Claflin Field, Newtonville, and will make an effort to open the season with a victory over Newton, a feat which will be rather difficult. Coach Allie Dickinson has a flock of flashy material to start against the invaders and everybody will be given an opportunity before the combat is over.

Lynn English visits Salem where Bill Broderick's charges will oppose the Lynnites at Betram Field. As in most cities, Salem has several football bugs who know of no good reason why Salem can't take the Lynnites into camp. George Sexton has his team all prepared and a close game is predicted.

Melrose High, with probably 5,000 loyal supporters, will dedicate its newly constructed stadium. With Everett as opponents the outlook is dubious for Melrose. George Brickley, Everett coach, has a squad of gridsters who have high hopes of winning the Suburban League title.

B. C. High plays St. Mary's of Waltham; Wayland meets Framingham and the Lynn general Electrics face the Dean Tech. All three games will furnish plenty of excitement for fans who will turn out in large numbers.

NASHUA CAPTURES "TWI" LEAGUE TITLE

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 19.—By burying Manchester, 10 to 1, here, Nashua won the Boston Twilight League championship and its fourth straight victory in the "Little World's Series."

Roberts pitched a good game, keeping Manchester's seven hits scattered. Nashua found Harrington and Newton for 17 bingles. Harrington was yanked in the third.

STAR ATHLETES IN MELROSE GALA DAY

Melrose Athletic Field stadium will be dedicated this afternoon with one of the most elaborate athletic programs ever offered in that section. There is to be many feature events which should give the Melrose folks plenty to cheer over. What will probably be the biggest event during the matinee performance will be the one-hour run, with their own Clarence H. De Mar, four times winner of the B. A. A. marathon classic, racing the Olympic champion, Albin Stenroos.

Then there is to be a football clash between Melrose High and Everett High. These two school eleven have been on the outs for a number of years and it should be a hard fought battle.

Many of the New England, A. A. A. U. champions are entered in the meet, including George Kinnally, 100 yards; Walter C. Baldwin, one mile, Carl Dudley, 220 yards; Frank Burns, 440-yard run; George Lermond, five mile; William Dooley, half mile; Edward E. Gourdin, board jump; and Clarence Shahie, high jump.

During the matinee there will be a band concert and an exhibition of the Melrose Girls' Scout Drum Corps. A baby carriage parade will be an added feature.

During the evening there will be dancing on a special floor that has been laid; a concession zone and numerous other attractions. All this and much more will mark a big drive to secure a fund towards paying the expense of the new Melrose Athletic Field. There will be one admission fee for the whole day. The price until the curtain drops will be $1.

The special one hour race will be very interesting with the veteran Clarence De Mar, pride of the East, having Albin Stenroos, the flying Finn as an opponent, and the following other star long distance performers: Ralph Williams of Quincy, Tommy Henigan of Malden, Wallie Carlson, Runna Ohman, Edward Brickil, Paul Mulligan and George Ferver. George Lermond of Boston College and N. E. A. A. A. U. five mile champion, will compete in the one mile run opposed by Walter C. Baldwin, N. E. A. A. A. U. champion, W. G. Dooley, and others.

Walker Worried Over Shade Bout

New York, Sept. 19 (I.N.S.).—Several critics of boxing, having looked over Mickey Walker in his training camp at Redbank, N. J., today expressed the opinion that the welterweight champion seemed plainly worried over the impending defense of his welterweight title against Dave Shade on Monday night.

They were unanimous in declaring that Walker was in good physical condition but that mentally he appeared distressed and that his reactions were slow. His boxing failed to please them after they had seen him in training sessions with Frankie Schoell and Jack McVey, both of whom used Shade's crouching, weaving style.

Early ticket sales were so heavy that Frank Flournoy, the Rickard matchmaker, predicted that the gate would run as high as $200,000.

WOODS AND MANDELL IN BOUT AT LYNN

Wee Willie Woods will take the place of Billy Hindley of England against Tony Mandell of Worcester in the feature ten-round bout at the Casino A. C. of Lynn on Monday night. Hindsley was taken ill which is what necessitated the substitution. Woods should make thing interesting for Mandell.

There will also be three eight-round bouts. George Siegel of Revere will tackle Charley P. Ricardi at Worcester, Jimmy Debs of Worcester will oppose Joe Burke of East Boston, while Bert Finch of Marblehead will have Joe Cappi of the South End as an opponent.

Old Colony Meets Guaranty Today

The second game of the series between the Old Colony Trust Co. and the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, will take place today on the Brookline High School Field at 3 p. m.

The Old Colony team is the champion outfit of the Bankers' Athletic Club league of Boston, while the Guaranty Trust ball players hold the same title in New York. The first game of the series was played at Ebbets Foeld, Brooklyn, and was won by the Old Colony, 11 to 7.

Admission to the game is free.

TWO BRAVES PLAYERS ON INJURED LIST

Pittsburgh, Sept. 19.—With two players on the injured list, Dave Bancroft's Braves opposed the Pirates in the final game of a three-game series here today. Vic Aldridge, ace of the Pirate pitching staff, was scheduled to oppose Jess Barnes.

The Boston delegation will be with out the services of Frank Gibson and Glen Felix. Gibson will be out of the lineup for a few days as a result of his injury when Wright collided with him. Felix was forced to the sidelines since with "Oiji" Smith for a few days after they exchanged blows in yesterday's combat.

Felix spiked Smith while sliding into first plate. The Pirate catcher thought it would be best to finish it in ring fashion and made a mad scramble for the Braves outfielder. Umpire Charlie Moran separated the players.

Bobby Smith or Jim Cooney will take care of the centre field assignment. After today's game the Braves will have an open date then the tribe will race the Cincinnati Reds on Monday.

NEGRO SPRINTER TO LIVE IN NEW YORK

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Bill's Most Successful Teacher." Says Chick Evans.

Just how loose is the golfer during the back swing, and just how tight isn't he? Golfers are cautioned to "loosen up" until a man, after of fact, they make themselves entirely too loose, for it is true you cannot hit the ball solidly when you are as loose as all that. Too tight implies that the player becomes stiff and rigid. Usually this rigidity can be plainly felt in the shoulders, when it perhaps is not noticed in the wrists and arms. There is a point midway between these two that is hardly possible of definite description. Each player finds it for himself. Some very good golfers appear to be very tight—Laurie Ayton is one of them. Others appear extremely loose—Mac Smith is in this class. You can usually find the right degree by using the golf club pretty much as you would use a hammer. Throw it through the ball as if it were a weight or hammer. This practice leads to rythtm too, which is always useful in golf.

SOX ENGAGE INDIANS IN TWIN BILL

By FRED C. LANE

Today, brother fan, is your last opportunity this season to watch that old Boston favorite and one of baseball's immortals, Tris Speaker, in action.

Tris was missing in the opening game of the series, sitting on the bench watching Eichrodt, a rookie who aspires to fill his manager's shoes, cavort around the center field pasture. This p. m., though, the Mighty Texan is due to direct his Indians in two games against the Sox from his accustomed place in the outer garden.

What a marvel the Indian pilot it. Eighteen years have passed since Tris came up to the Boston club from the Beaumont (Texas League) team and you can count on the fingers of one hand the players now in the majors who were there then.

Yet, at this writing, Speaker leads the American League in batting, and stands an excellent chance of being at the top when the curtain rings down. He can still play the opponent batters and run back and drag down long drives as well as he could in his palmy days, and better than any other outfielder in the history of the game. But for the gray around the temples, he appears as young as when he was starting here.

Like all mortals, his playing days must come to an end. His sending of recruits such as Eichrodt into the game to take his place occasionally, shows that he realizes this fact.

But as far as we can see, his baseball obituary isn't going to be written for a few years yet. He is still the greatest of center fielders and he will have to go back a long way before it will be of advantage to the game for him to select a successor. And, instead of slowing up, he apparently is getting better as the years pass him by.

The Sox haven't lost a series since opening their final stand at the Fenf. They split even with the Yanks and took two out of three from the Browns.

They want to continue to do good work. To do so, they must take both ends of today's twin-bill and they expect to accomplish the feat.

If they succeed, it will be the second double-header they will have won in three days, having beaten the Browns twice Thursday. All of which will be a remarkable stunt for a last place club.

Ruffing and Ehmke are down to do the twirling, which makes the outlook for a double triumph particularly bright.

Failure to yank Buster Ross in time cost the Fohimen the first game. The youthful southpaw started off like a champion and for four innings nary an enemy crossed the platter and Ross, having counted four times during this period, all was sunshine and laughter in the Sox dugout.

Then storm clouds were gathering, however, all unobserved by Lee Fohl & Co. and the deluge in the form of Indian safties landed in the fifth. Before the natives discovered what it was all about, six of the invaders had rambled over the platter; Buster Ross had retired without another out of a show and gloom had supplanted joy on the first-base bench.

Foh Them took up mound duty and the visitors saw the plate no more.

The damage had been done, however. The Sox could only squeeze one more tally across on Bennie Karr, a Fenway alumni, and the final score read:

Indians 6, Boston 5.

ELIGIBLE SENATOR PLAYERS ANNOUNCED

Washington, Sept. 19 (A. P.)—Washington's list of players eligible to participate in the World's Series, made public, includes eight pitchers, three catchers, eight infielders and six outfielders. Three rookies are among the number. The list follows:

Pitchers—Johnson, Coveleskie, Ruether, Zachary, Ferguson, Marberry, Mallon and Russell.

Catchers—Ruel, Severeid and Tate.

Infielders—Judge, S. Harris, Peckinpaugh, Bluege, Adams, Scott and Myers.

Outfielders—Rice, Goslin, McNeely, Joanes, Veach and Leibold.

ALL RESERVED SEATS FOR PITTSBURG GAMES SOLD

Pittsburgh, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—All box and reserved seats for the World's Series games to be played in Pittsburgh, conditional upon the Pirates winning the National League flag, have been sold and no more orders of any kind will be accepted, Sam Watters, secretary of the Pittsburgh baseball club, has announced. Secretary Watters said that on days of games, practically 10,000 non-reserved seats will be available at Forbes Field.

Runyon Says:

Word for the Coast.
A Partisan Speaks Up.
And Non-Native Born.
The West vs. the South
—By DAMON RUNYON—

I HAVE before me a querulous plaint from a gentleman who signs himself as follows:

"A Fan Who Lived, but Was Not Born, On the Pacific Coast."

That automatically makes him a Pacific Coaster at heart.

There is something in the atmosphere out there, some insidious virus that gets into the blood after one has lived there a few months, that makes one what we used to call a "Coast Defender," in spite of oneself.

I mean to say that a man might go out there determined to remain loyal to whatever other part of the land he owes allegiance, and before he realizes the import of his language, he hears himself declaring that the Pacific Coast produces the best football teams in the land.

THAT is the unmistakable indication that the Coast has claimed him for its own. After that he commences to take notice of the climate, and the large prunes, and the ripe olives, and the beautiful women, and the landscape, and the oarsmen, and to get in a mood to remove his coat when he hears aspersions against the shore line washed by the gentle Pacific.

MY friend, "A Fan Who Lived," etc., tells me that he occasionally hears some Eastern fan say, "There's another Coast lemon," referring to some baseball player from the land of the Lord's favor.

This is language which no gentleman who has ever lived on the Pacific Coast can stand. My friend, "A Fan Who," takes typewriter in hand. Indignant fist and asks if the Eastern fans realize that if it had not been for the stars sent from the Coast the East would have missed seeing some of the greatest ball players that ever wore uniforms.

HE ventures the assertion that all more real stars have come from the Pacific Coast than from any other section of this great and glorious country.

I am not prepared to take sides in the controversy, but it is a sure thing the distinction of such production lies between the Coast and the region south of the Mason and Dixon line, and the band may now quite appropriately render "Dixie" or "California, Here I Come," at one and the same moment.

Amateur Battle At St. Joe's Show

The boxing trail leads to the old Home of Action at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square, tonight, where the St. Joseph's T. A. S. of the West End will stage their second amateur boxing tournament of the season with one of the largest early season entry lists on record.

With three novice classes and two open divisions, William H. Cuddy expects to commence to prove the most successful of the season thus far.

The demand for entry blanks by the N. A. A. and driven by Will Dickerson won the Wet Weather Stake for 3-year-olds, worth $12,350, the second stake in value raced this season by 2-year-olds.

Seven started in the Consolation Wet Weather event and it proved way the Double Cross, owned by A. B. Coxe of Philadelphia and driven by Tom Murphy. The filly was off in front each time.

New York, Sept. 19.—It was formally announced the Bert Stant had been appointed secretary of the State Athletic Commission. Stant succeeds Dan Skilling, who is now a full fledged deputy.

The new member of the official boxing family has been a light fan for years, and its ideals in the present efficient and competent group handling local ring affairs.

FISHER BREAKS HARVARD GRID TRADITIONS

By TED LYNCH.

The hard and doleful scrimmages at Harvard are now under way. The preliminary work is over and the varsity has started its daily battles with the scrubs. Real, hard tackling has taken the place of limbering up exercises.

Harvard has never been driven so hard before, as the cramming of two weeks' work into six days, and scrimmaging the first week, proves.

With the hard tackling comes many chances for promotion. A falling by a varsity player means the graduation of a scrub.

Little has been said of Jimmy Knox's warriors. Out in the open spaces, with the world to look on, some seventy or so lads have toiled and labored all week, with only one idea in mind, to become a regular. There are some green, light and brittle, but there are others that look good.

Among the latter is George Laimbeer, who was promoted to the varsity before the Princeton game last year. Laimbeer is a guard, who weighs 219 pounds. He towers six feet three and one-half inches. In the case of Laimbeer a few weeks with the scrubs is better than the same number of weeks on the first team. Line Coach Charley Hubbard has taken special interest in the giant.

Another promising second stringer is Arthur May, the blond crimson sophomore. As has been previously stated, the Harvard kicking department is none too strong. May is on par with any of the regular kickers. Knox has shifted him from end to back because of his powerful right toe. He was the best of the Crimson kickers in the Spring practice and if he develops any carrying ability his elevation is in sight.

Other prominent scrubs are Eddie Burke, a center; "Sonny" Elton, a quarterback; Buker Lloyd, a tackle, and Eddie Sexton, a 190 pound guard. The scrub team that opposes the varsity in scrimmage is as follows: Best and Lloyd, ends; Davenport and Rice, tackles; Lee and Riker, guards; Wood and Burke, centers; Hurd, quarterback; Murfitt and Colcord, halves, and May, full.

Head Coach Fisher has ordered a light signal drill for today because of the hard work accomplished by the players all week, especially yesterday. Some of the players have been excused and the duration of the drill will be short.

Yesterday Fisher had a light workout in the morning, followed by a very vigorous one in the afternoon. The only injury of the first scrimmage was back Mayer, the veteran halfback. The Crimson punter received a slight injury to his kicking leg and Fisher had him call it a day.

"Joe" Crosby, the 180 pound varsity back, took a big jump. Previous to yesterday's practice the Jamaica Plain lad was rated as a member of Team C, but in the morning practise Crosby was found in Chet's position on Team B, the latter having moved up to quarterback when Jake Stafford was placed at pilot of the second team.

NEW ENGLAND FANS! HERE'S THE GREATEST FOOTBALL FEATURE

THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN will begin, shortly, the publication of what is unquestionably the most complete, informative and interesting football feature ever offered to the football fans of New England.

A series of thirty-six illustrated articles on "The Playing Secrets of Famous Football Stars" has been secured for exclusive publication in this newspaper. The series has been assembled under the direction of Ed Thorp, the noted player, coach and referee.

Thirty-six outstanding football players, many of them from New England colleges, will reveal for the first time the secrets of play which made them heroes of the gridiron and won for many of them places on the All-America team. Harvard players, Boston College players, men you fans know and have seen play, will tell in their own words real inside stories. These articles have a widespread double appeal:

For the spectator—Authentic and accurate stories and diagrams showing how to follow the game with better understanding of the technique of each position. The lookers-on is enabled to be a competent critic as well as a spectator.

ED THORP

For the football player—Invaluable instruction for the proper playing of each position on the team as well as characteristics of the game's greatest players.

GIRLS AND GAMES

"Sweet and Twenty" Wets, Hunks and Helen In Memoriam From a Cruel Vet On With the Sundae

—By Eleanor Early—

DOROTHY LEE, very sweet and only twenty, is going to teach the Seventy-first Regiment, National [illegible] York, how to fence.

When Eleanor Baldwin Cass, woman's international fencing champion, was some years younger, the late Dr. Dudley Sargent pronounced her the most beautifully built woman he had ever seen. She was the toast that season of Newport. Now she has five sons to sing her praises, and there's more satisfaction in what she says than all the old-time toasting business.

COLLEGIATES are a funny crew.

"Wet," they called a man elected to Phi Beta Kappa. And the girls they styled "hunks." Phi Betas, according to popular opinion, didn't know how to dress, nor to dance, and they didn't have time for athletics. They were in decided ill repute.

It took Helen Wills to straighten matters out. Miss Wills, who writes for this page, has been elected at the University of California to the national honorary scholarship fraternity. And now Phi Beta Kappa looks like a ritzy affair, for Helen's clothes all come from Paris, and she dances like an angel.

In our stylish academic circles it's no longer a disgrace to be studious, since the all-collegiate idol sets the pace.

ON Monday and Tuesday at Sandy Burr there is to be a Larry Paton memorial tournament. When Larry died, Nick Flatley wrote of an "eternal course"—

"Out in a land of endless day,
Where the skies are ever blue,
And all is smooth on fairway,
And every putt rolls true."

WE wonder what cruel man wrote this mean note:

Dear Miss Early:

Have been reading with some interest your notes on sports. I think that the theory of physical development for women is all bunk. Girls participate in athletics solely to win the approval of the men watching them perform.

No, Miss Early, the writer watched you play in your tender years at basketball. The only reason for the existence of that game was to note the well-shaped ankles of the performers.

The game was a joke and if played with flowing skirts would have been banned even by a decrepit, bloodless school committee. Put this in your column if you dare.

A VETERAN

Rutland, Mass.

Well, Veteran, we dared—but we think you're horrid.

THINGS like this we always note with great satisfaction. In 1922 Dorothy Knapp, the most beautiful girl in America, weighed 128. In 1923 Katherine Campbell, who succeeded Miss Knapp, weighed 128. Last year, when Ruth Malcomson wore the crown, she tipped the scales at 132. And now comes Fay Lanphier, who weighs 138. On the strength of that we're going to stop dieting and so right out to get a fudge sundae.

FULLER HOPES TO BE CHAMP

North End Star Only a Kid, but Is One of the Best of His Weight in the World

By JACK CONWAY.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission has ruled that the spectacular Sammy Fuller, North End bantamweight, is good enough to fight a world's champion. That's why Messrs. Foote, Buckley and Lane refused to permit Fuller to box Charley Costello of East Boston [illegible] Armory A. A. show this [illegible]

Fuller would have knocked out Costello in a couple of punches [illegible] Commission was aware of this fact and so would not permit the colorful Sammy to box us less he was pitted against a suitable opponent. As it was impossible to secure a proper rival for Fuller he won't swing into action until Friday night, when he takes on Matty Cordes in a ten-round tussle at Jimmy Miede's Salem A. A.

The writer saw Fuller knock out the highly touted Tony Carney of New Bedford in five rounds. A left hook to the jaw, followed by a right hand punch to the jaw, did the trick.

We asked Rip Valenti, Fuller's manager, to parade his protege into the sporting department as we were eager to talk with the young man who may some day become a world's champion.

It is refreshing to interview Fuller. He is bubbling over with life and energy. After you talk with him, you feel the same enthusiasm one gets after interviewing a Roosevelt, Dempsey or Ruth.

Sammy is still very young. He confided to us that he is just nineteen. As he is a kid, he also likes to have a kid manager. Manager Rip Valenti is twenty-five and has visions of the day when he will be the Jack Kearns of the boxing racket.

"And what is your story, Sammy?" we queried.

"Rip says I am going to become a world's champion," responded the little fellow, "so I guess I cannot afford to disappoint him. You know Rip and I are pals. We were brought up in the North End, together. Now I'm a boxer and Rip is my manager. That's the way it will be when I become champion.

Sammy Fuller is my fighting name. Sabino Ferullo is the name on my social cards. Rip doped it out that boxing fans would be able to remember the name Fuller easier than that of Ferullo. I guess he's right, too. Rip always is right, you know. He tells me that's the job of a manager of boxers.

"I do hope he was right when he told me I was going to become world's champion. Think of all the glory and money I would get as a ring king. If I became a champion, I could give my folks everything. Gosh, how my mother's eyes would pop out of her head if I could drop a thousand dollar bill into her lap.

"As champion, I might get married. I'll admit there are several dark-eyed Italian girls who think kindly of me.

"I started boxing three years ago. I was sixteen years of age then. I was a mere three pounds scaling wet. But I liked to fight. I guess every kid had to know how to fight in the old North End. That was no place for a cake eater. We always fought fair, which moulded character, though it ruined our looks.

"I started boxing as an amateur. I entered the 112-pound class, which meant that I spotted some of the other boys nineteen pounds. But what is nineteen pounds when a kid wants to get into a scrap. Down in the North End we never weighed in when we got into a mixup with one of the neighbor's children.

"Finally, I became New England 112-pound champion, then junior national 112-pound champion.

"All this time Rip was taking me along slowly. Finally he came to me and said:

"'Now, Sammy, you're ready. We're going to go out and get the dough. What a lot of fun we'll have when you become a world's champion.'

"I laughed at the idea of becoming a champion, but I did turn professional. I defeated Jimmy Madden, Wee Willie Woods, Charley Baxter, Matty Cordes and a flock of other good boys. Then I was matched to meet Carney. Honest, I didn't think I could knock out Tony. I knew he was mighty good as a boxer and one of the best boys of his weight in the country.

"Rip tells me I must battle the best men of my weight in the world. That's all right to me."

And after he had left, the sporting department could still feel the [illegible] shine and cheerfulness that Sammy had brought in with him.

Jack Conway has a story each week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Fishing and shooting are dividing attention of sportsmen along the salt water just now and when you see some one putting out in a boat it's a toss up whether smelts, tautaug, deep sea fish or birds are the quarry.

Carl Snow, skipper of the Stridaway, and a party of kindred spirits from the Quincy Yacht Club, are somewhere in the vicinity of Sand Neck for a week's coot shooting. Carl knows how to prepare those birds so they are not only edible but a very much desired dish—something in the nature of a feat—if you are at all acquainted with coot. When Carl returns if the goddess of the chase so wills, he intends to give a coot supper at the Yacht Club—an annual event since he took up coot shooting.

Eleven in fairly good numbers have been bagged along the South Shore during the past few days and some sportsmen have found good shooting on the islands off Weymouth and Hingham.

As yet no good bags have been reported by the duck and goose hunters with the exception of those who shoot over marshes and small bodies of water where ducks have in many instances remained throughout the summer. On the opening day twenty-three ducks were killed in the marshes near Cranberry Pond, in the vicinity of Weymouth and Braintree.

Smelts have started to run and some good catches are reported from the waters of Quincy, Hingham and the Fore River.

Off Manomet, Plymouth the tautaug are making their annual [illegible] visit. Several fishermen have returned amply rewarded for braving the choppy seas and anything but balmy weather of the past [illegible]

PIRATES NO LONGER UNDER DOGS IN BETTING

CHANCES EVEN IN SERIES

Will Not Be Terrorized by the Reputations of Senators' Pitchers

By JOHN V. REGER

Signs of national confidence in the Pirates to win the World's Series are reflected in the change in betting odds noted during the week. When it became virtually assured that Washington and Pittsburg were to be the centres of classic fray, bookmakers quoted odds of 10 to 7 on the Senators, probably to sound out public sentiment.

New York reports were that there was an immediate rush of Pittsburgh money that brought the quotation down to evens, and take your choice.

National sentiment in baseball matters is a queer bird. Last year it was a very city, town and hamlet rooting for the Senators to win; the fans were surfeited with New York's repeated victories. They got their wish.

Now, in New England at least, the fans are rooting for the Pirates, for no other reason apparently than that they are for rotation of honors.

Washington experts they will crumple up and die when they face Johnson with imposing record of 23 wins and 7 losses in the pennant drive this year, and his 13 year record of strike-outs that has earned for him the title of "Strike-out King."

The capital further expects that Covaleskie's spit ball, which carried him to three victories in the Cleveland Brooklyn world series in 1920, will simply terrorize the young Buccaneers and completely silence their bats, that Ruether's south benders coupled with his reputation of victory in one game of the Cincinnati Chicago series in 1919, will lay them low; that the south side giants of Zachary, who was the real pitching hero of last year's series by reason of his two victories, will simply mow them down.

Well, let's see. First, Manager Mcfeehnin doesn't have to worry over getting .300 hitters in his batting order. He's got them, from lead-off man to the pitcher. A pitcher to them is just something to be knocked off a mound, as many National League hurlers will testify.

The Brooklyn team possesses a pair of pitchers in Vance and Grimes who are fair counterparts of Johnson and Covaleskie. What did the Pirates do to them? Nothing, except to beat Grimes three out of four times he started against them and win three out of five from Vance. That's what they do with spitters and speed artists.

What do the Pirates do to south paws? Why, Carey and Gooch shift over to right-hand batting, and Mc Innis takes Grantham's place at first. And there you have a complete line-up of right-handers that makes an opposing forkander gasp as he looks down the line. The team is not weakened in a single position, for all the regulars are still on the job.

FISHERMAN'S RACE IS THING OF PAST

The fishermen's race has passed into history, according to the reluctant belief of Gloucester waterfront folk and the residents of Halifax, N. S.

In any event there will be no race between the fishing craft this year and it is very doubtful if one has another interna ional contest will be staged.

In the first place public interest has apparently waned in the race out Cape Ann or Halifax, which heretofore had drawn the attention of the world.

Latest Model in Pleasure Yachts

By GEORGE W. GRIMM,
Yachting Editor.

The curtain is about to be rung down on the 1925 yacht racing season in local waters. This season has been the most successful and enjoyable on record. Public interest and participation in yachting has been increasing and today there are more persons devoted to the sport than at any time.

The big regatta have attracted record entries and all down the line the interest was very great. From the Ro ul Hoyles sailed and raced to the additional ro ks knowner to the contest in all classes has been so great.

Increased interest in the many craft brought forth this year will give the yachting sportsmen plenty to chat over during the Winter months.

Among the yachtsmen one unfailing source of interest all season has been Vice-Commodore John S. Lawrence's new schooner yacht Advance. The Advance has created more interest and caused more discussion than any other craft in these waters. Last year Vice-Commodore Lawrence of the Eastern Yacht Club commissioned Burgess, Swasey & Paine of this city, to design for him a schooner yacht. The boat was built in Commodore Ankers and Jenson yards at Ackner, Norway. It was completed early in the Spring and sailed across the Atlantic from Norway by the northern route in 46 days by a Norwegian crew.

The Advance having proved her sea worthiness is unusual in many ways, mainly in that she carries jib headed sails on both the main and foremasts. On the mainmast she has the usual jib-headed mainsail, but it is in the rig between the main and foremast that she is so different.

In the dressing of the Advance Mr. Lawrence has adopted some radical departures which bid fair to revolutionize the rig of sailing craft, not only the pleasure and racing craft but in addition the fisherman which must make fast and economical trips between the markets and the fishing banks. His departure calls for the complete elimination of what has been known as the gaff foresail, gaff topsail and queen stay sail.

In the place of the sheets mentioned as being eliminated Mr. Lawrence has placed what he terms the Advance staysail and the main staysail. The Advance possesses one clean mainsail from the boom to peak, sans the topsail. From her truck, on the foreside, the Advance staysail comes down to the fore mast crosstrack, where it fastens on running rings. On each side it runs down the mainmast to a point materially below the main crosstrees. Its tip then sheers across the space formerly occupied by the foresail to the foremast.

The main staysail is lashed to a boom which projects from the main mast on the foreside toward the foremast. Its peak is adjusted to the mainmast just below the crosstrees. It sheers down through the space where on the other schooners one is accustomed to find the foresail. On the whole it makes a unique appearing rig but withal it's a fast one.

Vice Commodore Lawrence by his sail design added much speed to his craft and also brought into play an element of economy through the fact that both these new sails can be handled by a single man, whereas in the case of a foresail with regulation topsails several men are needed to man the ropes.

This new schooner yacht was rigged and overhauled in time to make her first appearance in the Eastern Yacht Club annual July 4 regatta. She led the entire fleet that day over the triangular course, proving quite fast in light going to windward.

The following week, on a cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club's fleet, she was well up with the leaders in every run and won two races in mostly head winds. The Advance was the winner of the Henry Taggard Trophy, awarded to the schooner making the best percentage in all racing runs of this cruise.

The Advance proved herself to be very fast on the wind, and altogether a very fast boat.

The success of the Advance has more than vindicated Vice-Commodore Lawrence's experiment. The marked superiority of the Advance over the orthorodoxed rigged yachts will probably bring about many changes in the rigging in this type of craft. The Advance is 85 feet over all 63 feet water line, 16 feet 6 inches beam, draws 11 feet of water and spreads 5,000 square feet of canvas.

The Hub soccer eleven will kick off with the Fore River eleven this afternoon on the old ball park, Walpole street and Columbus avenue, at 3 o'clock. This is looked upon as a great classy attraction, as the Ship builders in the past have always produced a winning team. While the Hub lads are a new organization, they have plenty of excellent players in Boath, Turner, Nelson, Singer and Anderson, backs on the Hub eleven, are a very good defensive group, while the forward line is always on the run with the ball, holding its own with opposing kickers.

Fore River has a star player in Oliphant at goal and he gets lots of help from McDermott, Fitzsimmons Johnson, Black and Sasson.

By HERBERT TREAT.

Chosen by Walter Camp in 1922 as an All-American tackle, Herb Treat will report some of the big college games for this newspaper.

THE success or failure of any modern football team is determined almost entirely by its knowledge of fundamentals. Even as the most magnificent structure needs a firm foundation, so must a football team thoroughly master the solid essentials which will ultimately decide its greatness.

Herbert Treat

Each football player has chosen his own way of preparing himself for the preliminary practice. Some have spent a summer of leisure in the open air, while others have chosen less desirable means of conditioning such as work in iron foundries, ranch life, and at least one performer was a first-rate seaman, notably Red Grange.

As each candidate reports for the opening day, his name, weight, class, and experience is tabulated. After receiving his equipment, he joins the hundred or more candidates, who, like himself, are striving for that select seven which starts the season. After a short talk from the head coach, the trainer assumes charge, and he immediately puts the squad through a few slow starts and short runs.

Almost immediately the squad is divided into three parts, backs, ends, and linemen. Footballs, medicine balls, charging machines and tackling dummies soon appear and the gridiron presents a busy spectacle. After a few days, the squad is further sub-divided into half-backs, quarterbacks, ends, guards, tackles and centers.

1. Collectively, these groups are taught the following details: Stance; that is, the proper position to assume in charging against an opponent.

2. How to fall on the ball correctly. The body must be circled around the football in the path of progress of the oval, with the elbows close to the body, and both hands and forearms fixed firmly around it.

More collar-bones are broken by incorrect manner of falling on the ball than any other way, and injuries always ruin the best football prospects. If a man cannot fall on the ball in practice, he cannot do so in a game.

Swede Youngstrum of Dartmouth was most proficient in this art, having recorded no less than six loose balls in a year which resulted in touchdowns.

3. How to throw a football: A football is thrown like a baseball with almost as much speed and accuracy. The ball is lightly grasped at one end with the fingers along the lacing for guidance. If the fingers are not placed along the lacing the ball cannot be controlled on wet days.

If a pass misses its mark and is intercepted, the game, if close, is practically over. Particularly was this true in the Princeton-Colgate game in 1922, when Jack Cleaves intercepted a pass on his own eight yard line and ran the length of the field for the winning touchdown.

4. How to carry the football while running—The ball is held tightly to the body with one end tucked in close to the elbow, and the other end gripped firmly in the hand. One hand must always be free to straight-arm. The ball is held in the right arm if the player is running to the right, and the left arm if he is running to the left.

The reason is obvious, inasmuch as he must have the arm nearest the opposing line free. Fritz Pollard, the sensational Brown halfback, played at Cambridge in 1918, a finished football player except in one respect, he simply carried the football with his arm around it, not bothering to tuck it close to his elbow. The result was that on practically all plays he dropped the ball, and Harvard recovered and won. The following season he mastered this detail and the result was appalling—Brown 21, Harvard 0.

5. How to pick up a fumble: This is rarely taught. The best method is to fall on the ball if it is usually a lucky bound which brings the ball in position for a player to run. It has been mastered by some players, and especially by Sam White, Princeton end, who defeated both Harvard and Yale in 1913 on long runs, each of which he made on recovered bounding fumbles.

A TASTE OF HONEY By Eric Maschwitz

A Story That Bares the Soul of a Woman Twice Cheated of the Love She Seeks

JERROLD FREYNE, a young author who has written a book in which he tells the world about marriage, is engaged to marry ELSPETH VOICEY, child of aristocracy. While planning his wedding he meets GERDA MASKLYN, wife of his college chum, and is smitten by her beauty and easy way of taking life. Immediately he experiences a sensation he had ignored in his book. They meet, time and again; she even follows him to Austria, where he is to serve in the British Legation. ELSPETH, too, follows, and he finds himself hunted by two women. One, he vows, shall be his.

CHAPTER 19

THE Kathrinswiese, that wide stretch of meadow where the Summer fair was held, was gay with lights and music and the movement of the crowd about booth and sideshow.

The place was a bedlam of noise, shrieks of excited laughter from peasant girls swinging high over the heads of the crowd, shrilling of whistles, music from the steam organs and the like.

When Jerrold disembarked his party from the fiacre, it was to find Gerda, Arakas and Terence Garfield standing by the brilliantly painted cash desk through which all prospective pleasure-seekers must pass

"Isn't this lovely!" exclaimed Elspeth, with such naive delight in the scene that they all had to laugh

They paid their way in and began to wander round the outer circle of canvas booths

Jerrold wanted to be with Gerda. Elspeth and Garfield were frolicking like a pair of children, attempting to throw hoops over preposterous German vases and terra-cotta reproductions of famous statues. He felt suddenly the need of her quiet under standing company amidst the clamour of it all. But she was not for him She drifted along beside Arakas, laughing, commenting on one thing and another. He would almost catch them up, and then they would disappear in the maelstrom of the merrymaking crowd.

He wondered then about her friendship with Arakas, how well they were acquainted, that on coming to Varvasch she had made her presence known first to the Count He had a bitter mistrust of Arakas' experience with women.

As he watched them together he cursed himself for a fool. What did it matter to him? The game was all over, he had ended it himself, and whether she played with another was no affair of his. Damn it, it was though. He could not conceal, from himself least of all, that Gerda still held him, and as long as he felt his pulse quicken at her presence or his eager mind question her mystery, he must feel jealousy towards men like Arakas

"She's too clever," that's what Elspeth had said, in a voice that held more than mere comment. She was right, Gerda was too clever, devilishly, bewilderingly clever, too clever for him. She knew how to hurt.

With the Count

They met the Ravensholmes standing arm in arm in front of the largest of all the merry-go-rounds, staring at its glittering passage with the round eyes of children.

"Oh, you two," Jerrold laughed, "you look as though life could hold nothing more splendid than a ride on the monster. Let's all risk it!"

At that moment the organ ceased to play and the roundabout slowed down. They clambered aboard, Gerda and the Count sitting together in a gilded chariot, Elspeth astride a fantastic ostrich, chipped and worn by time, Jerrold with Mrs. Ravensholme, the other two somewhere behind. A horn sounded, the organ creaked and began to play an old German tune, der kleine Jager, and away they went. There were two sets of birds, horses to care, revolving in opposite directions, a baffling complication.

Faster and faster went the gilded car, louder became the music. Each time he passed Gerda and Arakas, Jerrold watched them. They were sitting close together, laughing and whispering, shot past with a glimpse of vivid cherry red and grey fur, and were gone. Once when they came round again he could see that Gerda was laughing uncontrollably, laughing as though there were nothing else in the world but laughter, her head thrown back, her white throat gleaming across at him. He waved to her, she threw a quick glance at him, and shouted something which he could not quite hear for the noise of the music but it sounded like "Revenge."

Revenge! What?

"Revenge, revenge, revenge," called the broken slipshot tune of the organ. The man in the peaked cap came to take their pence. The merry-go-round came to a standstill. Jerrold reached across to the other car which had finished alongside his own. "Come on," he said to Gerda, "I want to talk to you. Let's go and win a coconut or test our strength." He made a great joke of it

"Test our strength, by all means," she said in answer "We're both so strong, my Jerrold"

In the far corner of that sloping meadow, withdrawn from the flare of the lights, stood a group of chestnut trees in flower, like trees adorned with white candles—and beneath the trees a little cafe of some few marble-topped tables scattered here and there, and a tent from which waiters in long aprons hurried with beer and coffee for the thirsty.

Jerrold led Gerda away from the lights towards this haven. They seated themselves at one of the tables, ordered their drink, and remained a moment silent.

Then, as the waiter delivered the bottle of wine and faded away, he asked her, "What did you call out to me just now?"

She smiled, a sidelong smile which tantalized him. "You heard, Jerry, a little—or you wouldn't ask me to repeat what I said."

"I heard something—something about revenge. What did that mean Gerda?"

"You don't know, eh" Michael knew well enough. That amused him. He has no great illusions"

"I don't like to hear you call him Michael. How long have you known him?"

"Much longer than I've known you, Jerrold." She smiled again and relapsed into dreaming, while he could not but admit the truth of it and the perversity in himself which made him care for her and yet not want to care.

"Well, revenge," he went on after awhile, "what about it? On whom are you planning vengeance, Gerda? On me?"

"No, no. On myself. Didn't I tell you that night you came to the flat that I would pay myself out for a mistake I once made"

"You said that, but what's the good, my dear? Does it put one right with oneself to exact a cheap revenge for one's own mistakes? Hasn't one just opened the book at the wrong page, and isn't it right then to slam the book to and forget the whole thing?"

"What! In Love?"

"You could do that, Jerrold? I believe you could. Things don't matter very much to you. That was what you once said to me about Elspeth. I believe it's true of you, too, Jerrold. You don't care. Nothing is ever so precious for a moment that it's worth while remembering."

"That's unfair, my dear. I can remember all kinds of things which it's been lovely to think of afterwards."

She made a little gesture. "And I can think of many which it has hurt to remember. I don't like to be hurt, Jerrold. It's only a man without pride who'll lie down under a blow. The proud man gets up and strikes back at the assailant. When I've hurt myself I pay myself out."

"What are you avenging now?" "I'm going to avenge my mistake in thinking the wrong thing about you, Jerrold. I'm going to mortify my flesh. You needn't be sorry about it because what I'm doing is of my own free will. My vanity shall be paid for."

"I don't understand" he said.

"You fool Jerry Can't you see? Michael Arakas"

He drew breath sharply. "What? Arakas! He's in love with you?"

"Of course," she countered. "Ever since we met in London a year or two ago. He was easy, my dear, as easy as you were difficult. I thought I liked him, and showed it for a moment. A word did it—and he was after me. He wants me still."

"But you couldn't—oh, you couldn't——"

"Go to him, do you mean, Jerrold? Don't shy at that fence."

"But answer me quick," he urged. "Quick, quick! Can't you speak, Gerda?"

She looked at him, lips compressed, a sort of scornful anger in her eyes that seemed to say: "You fool, can't you see, do you think I'm a child to talk like this when I don't mean anything?"

Aloud she answered: "Of course. If Arakas wants me he can have me, Jerrold. He loves me"

"Loves you? What kind of love, eh?" Jerrold's voice rose high and shrill

Gerda quieted him with a touch on the arm.

"Isn't That Love?"

"What kind of a love? A love that makes him tremble when I come near, a love that blinds him to anything else, that made him write to me and telegraph to me and make me unexpected little presents. He could not leave London for love of me. He could barely keep still at that dance of his for seeing you come to me like that with a light of excitement in your eyes He would never have invited you if I hadn't written as soon as you left London, and begged him to arrange our meeting. Isn't that love, Jerrold? Answer me now"

He nodded dazedly, and she went on with a torrent of words spoken so low that he had to strain his ears to catch them. "That's love, Jerrold, as he and I and the people who live bravely and completely understand it. Quickened pulses, straining nostrils, heart thundering in the breast, nothing on the brain but the picture of the loved one, utter possession, frenzy, not caring for anything else, a mad exultation

"But you—don't—love him?" Was that his voice, so sombre and tuneless?

She laughed, a whiplash laugh and rose to her feet.

"Jerrold—you fool—oh!" Her words came brokenly "Of course I don't.

He reached for her hand, but she brushed him aside

"Come along," she said. "Let's go"

He settled the bill, and they walked back towards the city, neither speaking a word, the cold, speaking deliberately, as don't believe you, Gerda. I believe you'd do that."

And she replied, in a tone as mat

Like what"

MAKING A HUSBAND

Sequel to "My Romantic Husband."

By Anne Lisle

"DON'T think he'd stand up under it, do you?" asked B. T. shrewdly.

I tried to answer. But before I could say a word, Jim came around the side of the bungalow appearing from the woods in which he had evidently been making off his wrath against Neal.

"Tell 'em?" he asked briefly.

"Yes," I said as sparing of words as the others in the tense and silent group.

"They handed it to me." Jim said without making any sign of recognition of the guests who had arraigned him so a little while before. Then he turned to Neal and said curtly:

"I don't blame you, young fellow. You know better now. So do I! I can tell by your conduct how the rest of the world is going to treat us. And I know darn well that I can't let Anne in for what I've booked her for. She has stood enough—"

He was interrupted by the whir of a motor. A cute blue coupe came up the dusty driveway. It was "at Dalton's car.

"Hello, the house! Hello everybody!" Pat Dalton called.

"So here's the real skunk!" B. T. said under his breath, but so explosively that I was certain Pat must have heard him.

But however, gave no sign of discomfiture. He came forward with the nonchalant and easy grace which always mark his movement.

He was not even stroking his white hair with the old nervous gesture which used to betray that he was not quite as calm as he seemed

Instead, he was holding out both his hands to me with a gay:

"I'm your fortnight's seclusion has done a lot for you, Alanna. You are after looking sweeter than ever. And how's old Jim—and young Neal—and our friend, B. T.? Well me all of you"

"Hello Pat," I said getting up slowly. "How d'ye do"

Neither B. T. nor Neal moved a muscle. Of course they remained just as Jim and I did, that Pat's visit had been timed to overlap theirs. With the amalgamation of the Tompkins and Dalton Sturges interests some months before, an old feud had been healed, and through Neal Pat had found himself in partnership with his life long business foe.

Naturally Pat would know of Neil's coming east. It was equally obvious that he would be informed that B. T. and Neal were together.

How Pat knew that they had headed straight at us was another matter. But the mere fact that he had broken his fortnight's absence proved that he did know of our motors. Bitterly I realized that Jim had received no word from Pat before this—that his sacrifice had been taken for granted. Dully I said to myself

"Why—he's not worth it! He's not worth anything—at all! Perhaps it was a bitter mistake to protect him. In saving Jeanie—maybe Jim has cruelly harmed Pat."

Almost a minute must have passed while all this was whirling through my mind Still no one stirred. Still Pat stood at the foot of the steps looking up at us with the gayety he had either assumed or felt when he first appeared

Now his face took on a quizzical expression. I went down the steps and held out one hand to meet the two he was extending.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

IN gradual glory rosy morning's light creeps up the east and banishes the night. And with its flush come bird's faint twitterings, presaging floods of song and swirl of wings. No hour in all the journey of the earth is lovelier than this, which gives day birth, which brings sun's splendor after starlight's dole, and with the sun of promise lights man's soul. For see! The dawn with day's renewal brings a hope so potent that the spirit sings; a flame of faith that lifts man on its crest and hears him up, serene, secure and blest. To the dawn is [illegible] set on high to show how soon man's griefs will pass him by, and the veils of night that vexed his way, will all dissolve before Love's golden ray.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

THE Sphinx is easy to read beside the cryptic expression on a married man's face when a bachelor begins airing his views on how to manage a woman.

* * *

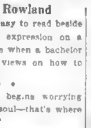
Keeping your job and your maiden name won't save you from going into total eclipse when you marry. You may escape the housework, but can't escape "that married look."



Helen Rowland

Getting married, according to the bachelor, is just exchanging the luxury of throwing your clothes and your ashes around, for the excitement of wiping your hands on embroidered gift-towels and winding the dining room clock.

* * *

A man's fear of "reforming after marriage," appears to be to cover up a student past with a stained glass attitude.

Most men who marry, nowadays, do so with their fingers crossed, one eye shut, one foot at the altar and the other poised for flight.

Somehow, when a man agrees to a divorce, a woman can't help feeling a twinge of tender regret at parting from anybody in such perfect accord with her.

The greatest shock of a bride's life is the discovery that a man doesn't spend twenty four hours a day just loving her.

* * *

All bachelors are so genial and charming! Where do all of the grouchy husbands come from?

DAILY SHORT STORY

PROFESSOR BRANT, his pen poised over the paper, looked up from the desk where he was registering the incoming students to see two kindly blue eyes and a smiling rosy face haloed by hair wavy and rich. He had expected that when he heard the name Margaret Leigh.

For a moment he gazed at her; then seemed to awaken from a dream and finished the task arranging her classes. He was to have her in Elizabethan poetry and, while a strange pleasure filled his heart, there was, too, a little tinge of fear—of what, he could not say.

Faded Flower.

That night in his study he took from a neglected shelf a copy of Herrick's poems. Opening it, he drew from its resting place a crushed and faded flower—a white rose. He held it in his hand while his mind went back twenty years to scenes he had hoped to forget, but which were as vivid now as they had ever been.

"The last remembrance of Margaret Blake. And now another of fate's ironies, her daughter, and her image, comes to me. How old it makes me feel, and yet how young. Margaret a girl—and Tom's. I wonder if she knows our story. I wonder, too, if Margaret knows her daughter is a student of John Brant. Truly it is a strange situation; but it is good to live again those glorious days and I can live them through the presence of his girl perhaps to know her will bring back some of the happiness that I lost through her mother."

The days passed swiftly for John Brant and swiftly, too for Margaret Leigh. A strange friendship grew up between the greying, middle-aged man with the calm, care-lined face and the timid, flower-like child whose cheek bore an unnatural, hectic bloom often she would remain after class to ask his help, and, as they bent over a page, her hand might touch his or a wisp of yellow hair lightly brush his brow. After she had gone he would shake himself from his dreams and call himself an old fool for thinking of love; while Margaret's child-like heart would wonder at her temerity in loving him.

Last Day.

June came. It was the last day of the year. The school was thronged with visitors and the halls and campus were crowded with merry, laughing people.

At the hour of Commencement came, everyone crowded into the great auditorium to see the graduates receive their diplomas. Margaret saw John Brant in cap and gown. He seemed to be seeking someone. His eyes wandered incessantly over the undergraduate students, but failed to find Margaret, who, partly hidden by a pillar, was seated near the door. A look of discontent was on his face as he was called to the platform. Margaret, unnoticed, went from the hall. She dared not trust herself to say good-by to him; it would mean that she would betray herself. But an idea came to her. He would know and perhaps understand.

She knew where his rooms were. There was no one to observe her as she slipped into the hall. His door was unlocked and pushed readily at her timid touch. She entered and closed it behind her. Taking a flower, a white, creamy rose from her bosom, she kissed it fondly and laid it on the open book upon his desk. Her hand moved caressingly over the leather back of his chair, touched his pipes, his books.

With a sob and a great smothering in her heart, she ran from the building. An hour later she sat wearily in the train as it bore her far away from him she had learned to love. She felt as though the world and all for which she lived had died.

Weary and Dejected.

Back at the college, Brant walked through the deserted corridors. The students had all gone and she had not even said good-by to him. Oh yes, he was a fool, he knew, to think that she would bother about an old, dry-as-dust professor in the joy of home-going. Weary and dejected, he stood in the door of the chase-room where so often he had lectured. He went to her place and his hand rested on the arm of her chair. A great ache was in his heart as he left the forlorn and silent room; no silence is so deeply sad as that which rules where mirth and laughter were.

In his study that night Brant's loneliness came forcibly home to him, and a spasm of pain showed on the face that already bore testimony of sorrow. She was gone with never a word, and he had only memories of her as he had had of her mother. He picked up the volume of Herrick that lay now always on his desk. In doing so, his eye fell on a flower—a white rose, fresh and pure as the dawn. He crushed it to his lips and his heart filled with unspeakable joy.

September brought its throng of returning students, but Margaret did not come. The Autumn's dreary weeks passed into Winter's dreariest months, and one day came a telegram,

THE WHITE ROSE

By Arthur Cunningham

MY DAUGHTER IS DYING! SHE ASKS FOR YOU. WILL YOU COME? MARGARET LEIGH

Two days later, John Brant stood at the deathbed of Margaret Leigh. How like a rose she looked now, white and soft as the petals of a flower, was her brow, her head, were flood with burning crimson. John Brant stood there with her mother, and the dying girl smiled up at them.

"My mother has something to say to you, Mr. Brant. I told her that I loved you when I knew that only a short time remained for me. And she told me a story, the story of how you kept silent and bore the guilt of the man she loved rather than cause her sorrow. He told her all before he went. Now she will be all alone. You loved her once; can you not love again?"

The twilight closed in upon them and before the night had come the soul of Margaret Leigh had passed. Over her death-bed, bent two heads, one still young and fair, the other grayed by the years, and two hands clasped in silent understanding.

By changing only one letter o [illegible] step down to spell a new [illegible] word on each step, ea[illegible] change TRAVEL into TRACKS in three steps, and TRACKS into TRAINS in three more steps? In the remaining 20 steps of to[illegible] puzzle, can you change TRAINS into TICKET with the aid of the definitions given below. Only one letter is to be dropped on each step and a new letter substituted to form another word. The solution to yesterday's puzzle, published herewith, will show how these step-word puzzles are worked out. The solution to today's puzzle will appear on Monday, together with another step-word problem—WORDS to MUSIC in 37 steps, with SONGS, VERSE, TUNES and NOTES as intermediate step words on the way down.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

NO WONDER CROWS CAN SEE SO FAR

By Foxy Grandpa

"CAW! Caw! Caw!" went the crows up in the treetop across the field in which they were walking.

Then they suddenly ceased their cawing.

"Wonder what stopped them?"

"Guess they saw us," suggested Bunny.

"Caw! Caw! Caw!" started the chorus again.

"They've voted on us and we're obviously all right," I chuckled.

We crossed the field and as we saw a party of men approach us I noticed that Bunny's ears dropped sadly and the most woe-be-gone expression came into his pink eyes. Even his whiskers drooped.

Bobby looked at me and I looked at Bobby. We both wondered what it was. But soon we saw why our poor little rabbit looked so blue.

"Hunters!" exclaimed Bobby as the men drew nearer to us.

Bunny unconsciously gave a quiet sigh and followed on slowly behind us.

"It's Mr. Jenkins," said Bobby. "I wonder if he's gotten anything."

"I hope not," I said, not knowing that it was the open season for rabbits and feeling very sorry for Bunny's family.

"I spread the alarm pretty well around the countryside," murmured Bunny, but of course sometimes there are several who may be on business or a visit and not hear it."

But Bunny's warning had been widely spread and quickly heeded, for when I said to Mr. Jenkins: "What luck?"

He shook his head and replied: "Not a rabbit in sight. This country must be pretty well cleared of them."

At this Bunny winked at me and his ears once more stood up.

The men went on and then Bunny showed me something which I would not have noticed if he had not been along.

"Do you see that the crows have all flown away, Foxy Grandpa?"

"Sure as you're alive there's not a crow in sight!" I exclaimed. "What happened to them?"

"They saw that Mr. Jenkins and his friends were carrying guns!" announced Bunny with a decisive nod of his head.

"But, Bunny," I argued, "How could they tell at that distance. Whether those men were carrying guns or not?"

"Because, Foxy Grandpa," and Bunny raised his right paw like a lecturer, "crows are blessed with telescopic eyes and they never have to worry about breaking their lenses either."

WHAT DID I DO WITH IT

By Hannah Wing

WHAT did you do with it? Do you ask yourself that question often when you want to use some recipe, formula or suggestion you want to send away to clip from newspaper or magazine? The chances are that if it was a recipe you just let it loose in your desk or put it in your cook book.

What can you do? Well, if you happen to have a typewriter and leisure or need busy work for a rainy or autumn day you can type them on cards and start a card file, indexed as your cook book is, under:

Breads, Cakes, etc. Many of the recipes are now printed in a width that is especially suited for filing. These may be clipped and pasted or the cards cut out and filed.

If that seems too laborious there is an even simpler plan. File your recipes on the same plan that your husband files his business correspondence. If you save government bulletins, an occasional magazine article, and the service leaflets you get from magazines you may as well start with a standard drawer file.

For this get the large manilla folders which are like open envelopes with upright tabs on which you can print your subjects. Into each folder then can go not only the recipes, but any articles or bulletins on cakes, for instance, in the cake folder. This you can extend to cover all your household clippings, laundry, garden, etc. Why not try

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU doubtless drink coffee, or tea, or chocolate, or cocoa or all of them at one time or another. You do this because you need a bracer. It is no fancied demand that makes you want a boost from your morning cup of coffee or tea.

Now, just what does it do for you?

A little coffee, taken preferably without sugar upon an empty stomach, acts as a bitter tonic, the kind of a tonic that the doctors call a stomachick, the caffein exciting the glands of the stomach to increased secretion and the muscle of the stomach to increased activity.

If this morning cocktail of coffee is supplemented with a full cup of coffee taken during the immediately ensuing meal, you will have consumed from two to four and a half grains of caffein. Since the cook has been too stingy to put in a decent amount of coffee.

This amount of caffein increases both the quantity and the quality of your work, mental and physical, and consequently promotes your efficiency.

If, later in the day, your labors, mental or physical, have brought you a sense of fatigue, you ought of course, to overcome it by rest or even sleep.

These stimulating effects of an average tabs dose of coffee last from two to four hours. As one of the effects of stimulation is [illegible] it is to keep a [illegible] from [illegible] it tends to [illegible] sleep. Therefore, if you take coffee after [illegible] four hours before retiring for the night.

In a limited number of cases there is such a susceptibility to the effect of coffee that a single cup of coffee taken with a hearty meal may produce a restless night with a [illegible] the next morning. It is needless to say that people with a [illegible] ought not to drink coffee at all.

A cup of hot coffee [illegible] you a sense of exhilaration or buoyancy or well-being that is by [illegible] a most [illegible] coffee [illegible] with a [illegible] due to the diffusion of heat from the stomach and to the [illegible] absorption of some of the [illegible] properties of coffee. The situation that is due to the caffein comes on more slowly—from a half hour to an hour—and is the more substantial and persistent of the desired effect.

This stimulating effect of coffee is super-added less when taken with food, and is not followed by the depression which ordinarily follows the taking of other stimulants.

It is to be remembered, however, that while coffee, or caffein, taken within the limits indicated produces desirable stimulating effects without depressing quantities not only fail to stimulate capacity for work physical and mental but very often [illegible] it. It follows, therefore, that neither tea nor coffee comes within that good old rule that "a little is good, more is better."

NEW YORK IS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT RADIO

By SAMUEL CURTIS,
Boston Evening American Staff Radio Technician

New York, [illegible] 1925 [illegible] pens for the [illegible] at the Grand Central Palace in the [illegible]. This is the case, however, as there are three floors of exhibits at the Grand Central Palace, and only one at the Radio World's Fair.

The Radio World's Fair is being held at the huge 258th Field Artillery Armory at Kings Bridge road and Jerome avenue, [illegible] in the Bronx. [illegible] seven miles [illegible] the [illegible] town and [illegible] New York and the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Boston to Quebec to see the radio show.

Transportation, however, is simple in New York, and by means of the subway express it is possible to negotiate the distance in a little over half an hour.

MANY EXHIBITS.

The 258th Armory is one of the largest buildings in the country. Four thousand men can drill there at one time, and the expanse of floor space is difficult to imagine. All this space is filled with radio exhibits from all parts of the country. While the title of the show here is "World's Fair" there are practically no exhibits outside of those of American firms. This is another great exhibit of American [illegible] the radio [illegible].

In the center of the floor at the Armory is a comfortable large broadcasting studio, and a broadcasting station is being [illegible] and the programs are reproduced at different points in the hall through large loud speakers. This glass walled entertainment seems to be very satisfactory one, as it is elevated far enough above the main floor so that visitors to the exhibition may clearly see all that goes on.

NEW ELECTRIC LIGHT

A very interesting exhibit at this show is of a new type of electric light bulb which has no filaments. This device is being manufactured by one of the independent tube manufacturers, and operates on the glow discharge principle. It is claimed that by filling the tube with various kinds of gases, that different colored illumination may be had.

Just as one enters the main door of the place, he is confronted by a dapper looking young fellow wearing a checked sport suit, plus four trousers, a bright green necktie, and, a monocle. The game is, that if you can make this fellow smile, you will win a pair of earphones. Needles to say, the "dude" is connected with the demonstration booth of a prominent manufacturer of earphones, and this scheme of attracting attention is certainly working.

GREAT INTEREST.

The most impressive feature of these radio shows, to an outside observer, is the great interest being displayed by the New York people in radio. To be sure there are many things which [illegible] at the [illegible] New Yorker but radio certainly is not one of them. Judging from the crowds, I gained one the impression that we are entering a new era, where such things as radio and aviation are making a new [illegible] for recognition. I speak of a nation because the [illegible] of Mitchell's recent stand on the army and navy as a [illegible] here New York is strong for [illegible] and the people seem to [illegible] Middle [illegible].

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

This country has grown so much and it now has such a variety of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange that the stock market no longer moves as one body. In the old days the market went either up or down or stood still. Now several divisions of the market may be declining while other divisions are advancing. For example, most industrial issues were going up recently while oils were failing. This week motor stocks have gone their own way regardless of ups and downs in other groups. The highest grade railway stocks are generally regarded as on an attractive price basis whereas many speculative stocks are considered dangerously high.

When the directors of the largest bank in the United States selected, in 1921, as president a man only forty-four years old, there was considerable head-shaking, for he was then entirely unknown.

Well, Charles E. Mitchell certainly has made banking history in the last four years. The National City Bank's shares have gone up under his regime from $350 to over $500; capital stock has been increased $10,000,000; deposits have increased more than $260,000,000, while total resources have expanded exactly one-third-of-a-billion dollars.

Should young men, anxious to climb, master accountancy?

Francis D'Arcy Cooper, successor to Lord Leverhulme, who was often called the foremost business man in Britain, is an accountant, trained with the company.

Charles B. Seger, president of the U. S. Rubber Company, first made such a mark as an accountant that he attracted the notice of W. H. Harriman, who loved to have the comptroller condition of a company boiled down to a few figures. Seger later was president of the Union Pacific.

A. R. Erskine, the forceful president of Studebaker, also climbed up the accountancy ladder. Although he was not an accountant, it was Frank A. Vanderlip's grasp of figures which gave him his early advancement. Walter C. Teagle, now president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, was at one time a travelling editor.

Modern business demands that diciting needs at least be able to understand figures thoroughly. One need, however, is still more important: to understand men.

* * *

Little good if would have done the Department of Agriculture at its time of day to have found the Armour-Morris merger illegal, for its two businesses were pulled into one months and months ago. The late J. P. Morgan asked, when there is talk of dissolving the U. S. Steel Corporation, "How can you unscramble an omelet?" As a matter of fact, Swift & Company do more business than ever the two largest Armour Company. However, under the dynamic direction of F. Edson White, the fight for supremacy is likely to become extremely keen.

Veterans Urge Department of Defense

Massachusetts Legion Endorses Colonel Mitchell's Appeal

Here is a piece of news from his home State of Massachusetts which may well arrest the attention and command the careful consideration of President Coolidge:

Massachusetts members of the American Legion, in annual convention assembled at Boston, unanimously and enthusiastically adopted a resolution calling upon the President and the Congress to set up a Department of Defense, to be administered and represented in the Cabinet by a Secretary of Defense, and to consist, for administrative purposes, of three divisions—one for Air, one for Land and one for Sea forces, each having its own civilian head.

While he was Governor of Massachusetts, Mr. Coolidge was elected an honorary member of the Legion post of his home town of Northampton.

As a citizen of Massachusetts, and as the First Citizen of the United States, he must be keenly aware of the increasing importance and inestimable value of the contribution which the veterans of the Great War, here and elsewhere, are making toward the leadership of the Nation they offered their all to save.

Therefore, when Colonel Mitchell's public appeal for the creation of a Department of Defense is promptly endorsed by his fellow members of the Legion in the home State of President Coolidge, surely the proposal is entitled to serious consideration, not only by the leaders in other States of this great organization of veterans, but also by the Government in "the Federal City," and at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue.

And there are other reasons why this proposal should interest President Coolidge and merit his serious study:

First: Because the plan for the organization of the executive departments, which President Coolidge inherited from his predecessor, included, in its orginal form, a provision for the consolidation of the War and Navy departments into a Department of Defense.

Second: Because the establishment of a Department of Defense is one way—and, as the Boston Evening American believes, the best way—to strengthen the national defense and give to the Nation the protection of an armed force, balanced and intensely modern, and capable of a defense that comports "with the dignity and security of a great people."

Third: Because the elimination of waste from the administration of the War and Navy departments, which the establishment of a Department of Defense would insure, is the only way, as this newspaper believes, in which the President and the Congress can give to the American people a stronger national defense without denying to them further relief from the burden of Federal taxation which still weighs heavily upon them.

A Department of Defense, as outlined by Colonel Mitchell and urged by the American Legion, would, therefore, promote and protect the prosperity of the American people by giving to the household of the Nation a modern defense at moderate cost.

That would be wise economy—better national insurance at a better rate.

Turkey Dooms Polygamy

All Marriages Must Be by Civil Officials

After nearly thirteen hundred years of the practice of polygamy under sanction of the Koran, which allowed each male follower of Mohammed four wives, Turkey is about to adopt a legal code enforcing monogamy.

By the new code, framed by a commission of the Grand National Assembly at Angora, and reported as assured of adoption, polygamy is completely abolished.

Marriages, to be legal, must be performed by civil officials, and no marriage ceremony can be legally performed if either of the parties has a wife or a husband living.

A Mohammedan already the husband of plural wives is allowed to maintain them in his harem, but he cannot add a new favorite to his seraglio.

Taxi Driver's Right to Tip

Court Decides 20 Per Cent. of Fare Is Liberal

Has the licensed taxicab driver an absolute right to a tip in addition to his meter-registered fare? If so, what percentage of the fare is an adequate tip? Is the taxi passenger the sole judge of what constitutes an adequate tip?

These questions have been answered in a Solomon-like decision from the bench in New York. In the case of a passenger who rode half a mile in a taxi, the meter register being twenty cents, the passenger gave the driver thirty cents, intending a tip of ten cents, or fifty per cent. of the metered fare. The driver, with insulting words, threw ten copper pennies in the passenger's face.

In court the driver was held, and the magistrate ruled as follows: That a tip and the amount of a tip is entirely optional on the part of a taxi passenger. That taxi drivers must take any tip offered, and be thankful for it. That twenty per cent. of the metered fare is a liberal tip to a taxi driver.

Public Will Pay as Usual

There seems to be a good deal of apathy in regard to the anthracite strike.

Some people regard it as a personal move on the part of John L. Lewis to retain his prestige at the head of the United Mine Workers.

Others seem to think that the operators are not particularly anxious to go on with the work at the present time, as they wish to sell the coal above the ground which was harvested at the former prices.

Both sides seem to be well organized and stubborn.

At the end it will be the public which has to pay.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

HALF the people in this country don't know when to go visiting and the other half don't know when to go home.

THE average guest will stay just as long as the hostess can keep her eyes open.

HE sleeps all day and keeps you awake all night.

ONE fellow called on same friends the other evening and they had to set their home on fire to get him out of the house.

HE came at seven-thirty and sat through three earthquakes.

THEY gave him a few gentle hints and finally had to sic the dog on him.

THE hostess handed him his hat and he said, "No thanks, I never wear it in the house."

HE began telling them the story of his life and when they woke up the next morning he was still talking.

HE stayed so late that they had to pull the shades down. They were afraid he might get a sunstroke.

HE was a traveling man but he never traveled at the right time.

HIS friends began playing the phonograph, the radio and the electric piano. In fact, they started everything going except him.

FOR awhile it looked like he was going to sit there and watch the eight-day clock run down.

THEY finally enticed him out on the front porch and slammed the door.

BUT he came back in through a window.

THIS way he stuck around the house you'd have thought he was on his vacation.

IT'S all right for a man to get two weeks off every year, providing he doesn't spend them in your parlor.

NO matter how beautiful your living room may be, you hate to have it used as a Summer resort.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "DEMANDING SECURITY."

A YOUNG GIRL used to DREAM of a LOVER
Who would ONE DAY
Come and CARRY HER off
HER FEET;
She was ALWAYS READY
To lose her HEAD and
Her HEART, believing,
Sweet creature, that
His were BIGGER and BETTER.
How old-fashioned
Such dreaming sounds!
MODERN girls don't figure
On what they will LOSE
But what they will GET
Out of a BEAU, and
The more MODERN the Girl is, the more
She DEMANDS
ATTENTIONS.
After a few years
Of MARRIED life,
More than likely she Will LOSE INTEREST in
Her husband, and
MOST likely forfeit
HIS interest, and
Having little PRINCIPLE
She STILL demands
Either SECURITY or ALIMONY.

THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters Must Not Contain More Than Two Hundred Words. No Anonymous Communications Will Be Considered

Praises Dispensary

To the Friend of the People:

May I just say a word of commendation for the Boston Dispensary. It stands today as one of the best educational centers in behalf of preventive medicine. All around that locality and farther away as well, it has given helpful advice to many poor and unfortunate ones.

Its quiet effective work in this direction in obtaining the best results from modern methods, has urged me to say these words.

MARIE M. GODFREY,
Pleasant street, Boston.

Army and Navy Sale

To The Friend of The People:

Through your column, may I make a plea for the annual rummage sale of the Army and Navy Club, Nov. 17, in Horticultural Hall?

Gifts of wearing apparel, furniture, books, hats and anything that is serviceable, will be gratefully received.

The sale is held for the benefit of men in the service, disabled veterans and those who have been discharged, seeking positions. Send articles to

MRS. ARTHUR J. KELLY,
No. 10 Park square, Boston.

Question of Postage

To the Friend of the People:

May I say, through your column in answer to Captain J. A. Opperman, U. S. A., that the Army and Navy departments never pay postage, being part of the government. I never knew of any person working as a government employe who did not pay postage on private mail.

I am a postal worker and always pay the required postage. For five years I served in the U. S. Army, but the government never gave me free use of the mails, only for a while in the A. E. F.

FRANCIS J. CRONIN,
Boston.

Wants What She Sees

To the Fiend of the People:

The average married woman of today does not practice economy. What she sees in dress, ornaments and recreation, to compete with others, she must have. I do not agree with your correspondent that woman today is economical in her tastes.

The married woman who has earned her own living knows more what economy means to a household than the young married woman who has been coddled, carries a college diploma, and wants more than her husband can earn.

This craze for everything that appeals is at the bottom of many divorce suits.

HENRY G. HUDSON,
Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

Being Kind On the "El"

To the Friend of the People:

In going from Everett on the Elevated to Sullivan square, a lame young man got on the train and there was no seat for him. He was holding his crutches and with the other hand, grasping a strap.

I got up and gave him my seat.

The fellow who was sitting next to me said in a whisper: "If you wore crutches, he wouldn't get up and give you his seat."

I replied, "I'm not worrying what other people are doing, or would do. I want to do all I can for the lame."

With that remark, he just smiled and said in return, "You'll get over that spirit, if you ride long on the Elevated. It's every man for himself."

This is what you get for being kind on the Elevated.

H. ELLIS, Everett, Mass.

Bible Prophecy

To the Friend of The People:

The Trades' Union Congress, held at Scarborough, England, registered its opposition against Anglo-Saxon imperialism, September 12 by a large vote.

This imperialism has been in operation for 1278 years. The last remnant of Brittannia was surrendered to Anglo-Saxon subjugation in 647 A. D. by Devonshire and Cornwall.

At this time the Anglo-Saxons took over the National powers of Brittannia, and changed the name to England.

This is all prophasied in the Bible, —Revelations, Thirteenth Chapter, Fifth Verse.

Wonderful how the Bible prophesies future events.

EDWARD GRIFFITH.
Grenville street, Roxbury.

Silent Evidence

To the Friend of The People:

This old question of nagging wives pops up every now and then. A case came up in court the other day, where the judge looked over his spectacles at a woman railing against her meek husband and accusing him of non-support.

The woman talked like a phonograph for over five minutes, detailing the wrongs she had suffered and when the husband's turn came for questioning, he said nothing in rebuttal. That silence was just evidence. The case was postponed.

BRITAIN ALWAYS CAN MUDDLE THROUGH

By Dr. FRANK CRANE

ENGLAND is at present facing an industrial crisis.

Only the interference of the Prime Minister prevented a tie-up of the transportation of coal that would severely cripple the industries and daily life of the country.

But somehow England will muddle through.

There seems to be a modicum of sound sense in the British public that always restrains them from going too far. There has doubtless been as great a change in affairs in England as in France under the Revolution. Indeed, there be some who say there is more democracy in England of a real kind than there is in France, and that the French are really a more aristocratic nation.

Emerson said that he found the Englishman to be a man who stood most squarely in his shoes. The English have the science of order ingrained in them. Whatever disaster threatens, the Englishman has always found some way to avert it without destroying the government.

Those who think that socialism is confined to the lower classes in England, or that it is a class issue, are mistaken. The trouble is that probably as many of the so-called upper classes are as socialistic as the lower classes.

England is really a great democracy. It has been claimed that the real founder of the British Empire, including outlying provinces, was George Washington. It was he who taught the nation how to rule foreign countries, at the same time to let them rule themselves.

It is a mistake to suppose that the English dominance is due solely to her armies and navies. This may have had something to do with it, but the Englishman is essentially a shopkeeper. He wants other nations to prosper so that he can trade with them. His eye is always upon their pocketbooks. It is for this reason that Great Britain maintains her solidarity.

Whatever danger seems to threaten the British government will be avoided by the common sense of her people, and some way will be found to satisfy the increasing demand of the worker without destroying the government.

HOW MAN MEASURES THE UNIVERSE

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Will you kindly inform me how the distances of stars too far from the earth to use the parallax method are measured or estimated? I understand, of course, that the distance of the nearer stars can be measured by parallax, using the diameter of the earth's orbit for a base, but in the case of stars 20,000 light-years away, how could such a base yield any angle, and if not, what other method could be used?—B. H. L., Silver Spring, Md."

A PARALLAX of about one-tenth of a second of arc is perhaps about as small as can be surely measured.

That means a distance equal to 2,063,000 times the earth's distance from the sun. It also corresponds to a distance of 32.6 light-years. The parallax corresponding to a distance of 20,000 light-years is about one-tenthousandth of a second of arc, and is, of course, hopelessly beyond direct measurement.

As you surmise, therefore, other methods have been discovered for determining the distances of the more remote stars, which comprise the vast majority of all that the heavens contain.

The most effective is that based upon the system of absolute magnitudes, combined with data derived from the peculiarities of certain classes of stars.

A Comparison

To illustrate, suppose that there was a kind of electric lamp emitting light of a peculiar quality, or color, and that all lamps of that kind were known to have the same absolute brightness or candle power. Then, inasmuch as the brightness of a light of a given intensity varies inversely as the square of its distance, you would be able to tell the relative distances of a number of such lamps scattered about you simply by measuring their comparative brightness.

If one lamp, for instance, appeared four times as bright as another, you could say at once that the first was twice as near as the second, since 4 in the square of 2, the nearer lamp appearing by the optical law brighter than the farther one. Then, if you had first measured the brightness of a lamp placed at a certain known distance, you could use that as a standard for estimating the distances of all the others, giving the same kind of light. Suppose the distance of the standard lamp to be 1,000 yards; then a lamp 2,000 yards distant would be ¼ as bright as the standard, and one 4,000 yards distant would be 1/16 as bright as the standard, and so on.

Now, astronomers have lately adopted a similar method for determining the distance of stars too remote to yield a measurable parallax. They have been enabled to do this because it has been found that large classes of stars, showing the same spectroscopic, or physical peculiarities, are all of similar absolute brightness, or magnitude.

In that respect, then, these stars, which are very numerous, resemble the lamps that we have been imagining, inasmuch as their distances can be inferred from their relative brightness. A few stars of these classes are within parallactic reach, so that they afford the standard by which the distances of the others can be determined as soon as their brightness has been measured.

Of course, the method does not apply to stars that do not fall within the peculiar classes concerned, but it has been found to be of a very wide practical application, and has enormously extended the measured bounds of the universe. The principle of comparison of brightness with an absolute standard is applicable to the immensely distant globular star clusters, which there is reason to believe are all of quite similar absolute magnitude.

Brightness Measured

In this way distances of hundreds of thousands of light-years, corresponding to parallaxes reckoned in millionths of a second, have been determined.

The success of these methods depends upon the fact that the brightness of stars can be measured when their distances are so great that there is no possibility of measuring their parallaxes.

In there not something within us which powerfully protests against the idea that creatures who have been able to perform these feats of far-reaching intelligence are only chemical automatons, without power of choice or will of their own?

WHY ETHICS HOLDS HIGH PLACE IN BUSINESS

There are plenty of men and women workers who will tell you that they deserve more money and more consideration than they get.

But very often when their cases are investigated it is found that they have perhaps no sense of ethics.

Ethics is a valuable asset.

Ethics is the fundamental principle of right action.

Without ethics a worker or a professional man or woman loses the respect of employers and in a sense his or her own self-respect.

Ethics arises from a moral sense.

Ethics forbids anything that is dishonest or mean.

It is not ethical to "spy" on a rival firm's business.

That does not mean that you should not keep your eyes and your ears open for all the pointers you can get legitimately to help you in getting ahead of your competitor.

But ethics will not permit you to worm yourself into the confidence of an unsuspecting clerk and get information for your own purpose.

The best business is built upon strict adherence to the golden rule.
